Preface

The task of assembling the 50th anniversary edition of the Georgia Gerontology Society history proved to be both fascinating and challenging. The Georgia Gerontology Society, founded in 1955 and officially incorporated in 1958 in the Clarke County Superior County, was one of the first associations of its kind in the nation and has a rich history. The names of its Founders are the names of the very people who started many of the university gerontology programs, the community service organizations, and the state aging offices. They were a focused, committed, and hard-working group of people who foresaw the need for growth and organization in a young field.

A review of the original Incorporation Charter, dated September 18, 1958, informs the readers that the corporation was “formed for such educational and cultural purposes as in the judgment of said corporation will promote the scientific study of the aging process; foster the development and dissemination of knowledge relating to aging; foster activities and programs relating to aging; and afford a common meeting ground for representation of the various scientific fields interested in aging and those responsible for the care and treatment of the aged.”

The earliest efforts to meet this mission focused on an annual meeting and conference, awards for professionals and non-professionals, and advocacy for state and federal legislation which improved the lives of Georgia’s older citizens. The annual meeting and conference and the awards program have been the most visible and continuous Society activities.

The intent to “afford a common meeting ground” has given rise at various times to special interest sections, forums, and committees and to coalitions of service providers, organization directors, planning directors, and advocates. Through its advocacy efforts, the Society was instrumental in establishing the Governor’s Coordinating Committee on Aging and elevating its stature to become the Office of Aging (now the Division of Aging Services), in implementation of aging services throughout Georgia, and gaining legislative status for the Georgia Council on Aging.

Throughout its various incarnations and reorganizations, the Society has remained remarkably true to its original purpose. In fact, the changes in its focus, activities and structure have usually mirrored changes in the needs of its membership in the academic and services fields. Constant through the 50 years is the struggle to remain relevant to its membership and to provide the cross-pollination for which it was founded. As fields have become more specialized, this network has become both more important and more difficult to achieve.

The Georgia Gerontology Society has benefited from some remarkable leaders through the years who have given unselfishly of their time and talent, but there are also countless Board and committee members, most not named or pictured in these pages, who have ensured that this network of Georgians has continued to exist as a unique multi-disciplinary organization in our state. I regret that there was neither the space nor photographic record to include everyone.

Georgia Gerontology Society

Since 1955, a tradition for professionals in aging

Mission Statement

Georgia Gerontology Society promotes quality leadership in aging for the benefit of older Georgians and their families. GGS provides opportunities for members to participate in networking, professional development and training, advocacy and sponsorship of student scholarships.

- Adopted, 1996

Purposes

- Promotes efforts to meet the needs of older people
- Provides a forum for communication and a common meeting ground for people interested in aging
- Works cooperatively with other groups in expanding services, programs, education and research in aging
- Encourages awareness of the needs, rights and continuing contributions of older people

The Georgia Gerontology Society A Brief History

The Georgia Gerontology Society was established in 1955 as a result of gerontology forums held in the state. The Society was one of the first state voluntary gerontology organizations in the country, made up of people who shared a common interest in aging. The first decade of the Society resulted in the establishment of the Annual Meetings which served as the primary activity of the organization and remains the focus even today. The original goals and objectives of the Society included: promoting the scientific study of the aging process; fostering the development and dissemination of information related the aging; and affording a common meeting ground for representation of the various scientific fields interested in aging and those responsible for the care and treatment of the aged. Two of the major accomplishments of the first decade were the publication of Georgia: Fact Book on Aging and the formation of a state Coordinating Committee on Aging, which was the forerunner for the Georgia Commission on Aging.

During the second and third decades of the Society, considerable thought was given to defining the role of the organization. Legislative activity began via the establishment of a legislative committee. This was also during the time period of the enactment of the Older Americans Act and Medicare, important legislation which added credibility and scope for the Society. The awards program, recognizing outstanding service or achievement in the field of aging, was developed during this time and remains in existence today. At the 1969 Annual Meeting, there were 42 cooperating agencies and organizations listed on the program, demonstrating the beginnings of the Society's membership diversity. In defining its role, the Society's primary purpose was to serve the professional needs of people who work to improve the quality of life for older persons in Georgia. In keeping with this purpose for future professionals, a scholarship fund was established during this time. The first history of the Society was compiled by Louis Newmark, the organization's first president, who remarked, "May the years ahead grant the Society the same kind of leadership it has had in the past, and that the organization my continue to grow and prosper..."

Throughout the fourth and fifth decades, the Georgia Gerontology Society focused on promoting and coordinating its work with other state and national organizations and programs serving the aging, thus creating renewal, growth and advancement throughout the Society. As a result of this involvement, the Society continues as one of the leading state organizations for aging adults in the nation. Among the major achievements were the establishment of a permanent statewide office and staff; collaboration with national organizations like the National Council on Aging and the American Society on Aging; co-sponsorship of statewide events like the Georgia Older Worker Luncheon, Senior Week at the Capitol, the Georgia Conference on Aging, and AARP training; and operation of the Senior Advocacy Project to monitor the Georgia General Assembly and publish the Senior Issues Newsletter. The Society has sponsored and conducted forums and training workshops throughout the state, illustrating that the Georgia Gerontology Society has indeed continued to grow and prosper. GGS established special interest Sections to enhance networking and training opportunities which often found permanent homes in other organizations or served a short-term purpose.

As the Georgia Gerontology Society embarks on a new decade, the achievements and accomplishments of the past can be looked on with pride, but they will also serve as a guideline in efforts to meet the challenges facing the Society in the 21st century in promoting quality leadership in the field of aging.

A Foreword to Chapter I

The Georgia Gerontology Society, founded in 1955, is a membership organization of people who share a common interest in the field of aging. Members represent a broad constituency of practitioners, researchers, educators, students, advocates, volunteers, and senior adults dedicated to serving the needs of older people.

Over the past 30 years, many professionals and volunteers have exerted a high level of energy to make the Georgia Gerontology Society a successful liaison organization for senior adults. It was through this Society that the state Coordinating Committee on the Aging was established... the forerunner of the Georgia Commission on Aging.

The Georgia Gerontology Society is a vehicle for professionals in the field of aging to directly and indirectly provide services and support for the increasing older population. This historical compilation is an insight to some of these services and the accomplishments of the Society.

While the efforts of the Society are certainly becoming more visible with each achievement, the Society will continue its commitment to master the increasing problems affecting senior adults.

The Society is indebted to Louis Newmark, the Society's first president, for writing this valuable history. As reflected herein, the Society has an interesting history.

President, 1986

Introduction by Louis Newmark

An organization, just like an individual, needs to take a look at its life from time to time. A good occasion is when the organization reaches a milestone in its existence, such as the age of thirty. What has the Society accomplished in those thirty years? What were some of the problems and difficulties that brought ups and downs to the life of the Society? Who have been its leaders? To what extent has the organization carried out the purposes for which it was founded? The present leaders of the Society generally know little of its early beginnings. It is important to have a written history of an organization which has tried to promote the welfare of the aging population of Georgia for thirty years. This history will give the highlights of this effort to serve the needs of the elderly citizens of this state

Background: the Genesis of the Georgia Gerontology Society

In 1950, a National Conference on Aging occurred. Attending was Elizabeth Powell, who represented the University of Georgia. She decided to do something about what she had learned in Washington and she organized the Forums on Gerontology. The first forum held in November 1950, was not only the first conference on the subject of aging in Georgia, but also possibly the first state conference in the nation. The Forums on Gerontology continued for several years until 1954 when a group decided not to meet again until they were organized. A bylaws committee was appointed, officers were elected, and the Georgia Gerontology Society began.

First Decade (1955-1964) Annual Meetings

The primary activity of the Georgia Gerontology Society was and still is the Annual Meeting. Although the records are not complete in terms of the themes and places in which the Annual Meetings were held, it seems that one has been held every year since establishment of the organization. The chronology of the Annual Meetings with all the known themes and places will be found in the Appendix to this history.

At the first Annual Meeting in 1956 at Emory University, the president gave an annual report. The main activity of the year was the setting up of seven fact-finding committees which covered: income maintenance and employment, housing and living arrangements, health and medical care, recreation and creative activities, institutional care, social services and education. Dr. B.O. Williams of the University of Georgia was the chairman.

Much of the information about the Annual Meetings in the first decade was taken from "Gerontology in Georgia" by Elizabeth (Betsy) Powell and Robert Wray, of the University of Georgia Institute of Gerontology. The chronology shows no themes for the first five years or for 1963. Proceedings were published for the seventh Annual Meeting in 1962. That conference included programs to meet the recognized needs of older persons. A nationally known speaker, Dr. Clark Tibbits, deputy director, Special Staff on Aging, U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare, told about regional and national development in the field of aging. Another presentation was made by Dr. John Mauldin, secretary, Medical Association of Georgia, and recently appointed chairman of the Georgia Commission on Aging. His topic was "Medical Assistance to the Aged Program in Georgia". The president of the Society gave an annual report highlighted by the organization and activities of the Atlanta chapter. The membership of the Society, she reported, had increased from 108 to 139.

Important Activities of the Period (1955-1964)

As a result of the work of the seven fact-finding committees, a publication entitled Facts About Aging in Georgia was put out in 1957 with significant help from the University of Georgia. Dr. B.O. Williams, Emeliza Swain and Elizabeth Powell, all from the University of Georgia, were largely responsible for the project's completion.

On September 19, 1958, the Society was incorporated. Four members of the organization were applicants: Louis Newmark, Atlanta, A. Tapley Hanson, West Point, J. Fred Gunter, Marietta, Elizabeth Powell, Athens, and Jay D. Gardner, Athens. The charter stating the purpose, objectives, and powers of the Society was issued in Clarke County, Georgia.

In the fourth year of the Society, the president, Ed McDaniel persuaded Governor Ernest Vandiver to set up a state Coordinating Committee on the Aging. It brought together all the state officials involved in programs related to the aging. It was also the forerunner of the Georgia Commission on the Aging.

In 1961, the Society prepared and published Aging: A Challenge and an Opportunity. Virginia Smyth and Elizabeth Powell were instrumental in the publication of this document. The data were taken from background papers of the 1961 White House Conference on Aging, policy statements of the conference, the Fact Book and the report of recommendations of the Georgia's Commission on Aging. It covered all the major subjects in the field of aging.

The president's 1962 annual report listed the following outstanding activities:

- Organization of an Atlanta chapter.
- Formation of a speaker's bureau (with an attractive brochure).
- Participation with the Georgia Commission on Aging and the University of Georgia in a project to clarify the role of the retiree and his status as related to community life.
- Support for the creation of the governor's commission on Aging with Society's secretary-treasurer, Elsie Elvis, as the first executive director.
- Publication of several newsletters.
- Participation in a project for the Professional Examination Service of the American Public Health Association regarding questions on aging.

Organized by Scott Houston, the Atlanta chapter was active in 1962. It worked with the Atlanta Housing Authority, the Community Council of the Atlanta area, specific agencies, and key citizens to interpret the need for a senior activity center to be included in the plans of the West End Housing for the Elderly project. Atlanta's chapter also began developing a directory of services to older people in metropolitan Atlanta. With the help of the Commission on Aging, the Community Council of the Atlanta area, and several of the Kiwanis Clubs, a directory of services was completed in 1963.

Finances and Membership (1955-1964)

The financial reports for 1957 to 1959 showed bank balances ranging from $270 to $465. Almost all of the income was from membership and registration fees for the Annual Meetings. The expenditures were largely for the Annual Meetings. In 1957, the amount spent for the conference in Athens was $247.59. Another expense for that year was $119.25 for Facts About Aging in Georgia. The treasurer's report for 1963-1964 gave a total of $1,530.45 for income with the two biggest items being $710 for memberships and $533 for conference registrations. On the disbursement side the total came to $1296.98, with $690.37 for conference expenses, $300 for a directory of services, $199.48 for office management and $107.13 for miscellaneous. The total assets of 9/25/64 were given as $939.76.

While the records have membership lists for 1956-1958, it is difficult to know the exact number of members for those years. The best estimate is between 65 to 75.

Leadership (1955-1964)

In any new organization, the leadership in the early years has to establish a foundation on which the future leaders can build. With very limited resources and a relatively small membership, the presidents of the Society in its first decade did remarkably well.

President, Virginia Smyth, (1961-62) together with her Board of Trustees, appointed committee chairmen, and others, had a most successful year. Their accomplishments have already been referred to under "Important Activities of the Period." There were other presidents who made significant contributions to the Society. To all those who served in leadership roles in the first decade, the Society owes its thanks and appreciation for their pioneering efforts.

Revision of the Bylaws (1955-1964)

The original bylaws of the Society which were written in 1955 are not in the files. They covered the usual articles, and the purposes they set forth were made as part of the articles of incorporation of the Society. They were as follows:

- to promote the scientific study of the aging process;
- to foster the development and dissemination of information related to aging;
- to afford a common meeting ground for representation of the various scientific fields interesting in aging and those responsible for the care and treatment of the aged.

The first revision of the bylaws was made in 1961, followed by another revision a year later. Neither of these revised bylaws is available. Since the Atlanta chapter was organized in 1962, it is reasonable to assume that one of the revisions in the 1961 bylaws was an article pertaining to the formation of local chapters. On October 16, 1964, the bylaws were revised for the third time. The aims of the Society are the same as in the original bylaws. The only change mentioned in the 1965 president's message to the membership deals with the provision for a rebate of $1 of dues per member to each local chapter.

Second Decade (1965-1974)

Annual Meetings

Considerable planning was done to ensure a good attendance for the 1965 Annual Meeting. Several programs regarding the Milledgeville geriatric situation, the University of Georgia program in gerontology, the new housing act, and the interpretations of the Social Security amendments were in the tentative program for the conference, but no final program exists in the files. At the business session, a motion was made to the membership by the Board for an award of recognition to be given to a Georgia person for outstanding endeavor in the field of aging. Another feature of the 1965 meeting was the 10th anniversary celebration.

The keynote speaker in 1966 was Dr. Raymond Payne, Department of Sociology, University of Georgia, who spoke on "Facts and Figures on Gerontology in Georgia." Other programs included were a panel on Medicare in Georgia, programs under the Older Americans' Act, amendments to the Social Security Act, Economic Opportunity and the Older Adult, Poverty, Multi-Service Centers, Daycare, and the Foster Grandparents project. The 1966 meeting was the first at which awards were presented for outstanding service or achievement in the field of aging. One was given to Mrs. Elsie Alvis for her outstanding contributions and one to the University of Georgia's Council on Gerontology. The list of award winners from 1966 to the present can be found in the history's Appendix.

In 1967 the keynote speaker talked about the accomplishments under the Older Americans' Act. He referred to three grant programs under the Act, Title III Community Planning Services and Training, Title IV Research and Development, and Title V Specialized Training of Persons for Programs in Aging. The awards program reached a new level when 14 awards were given in 1967. One was the first John T. Mauldin Award for outstanding achievement in the field of aging, which went to Dr. Mauldin. A distinguished service award was presented to Mrs. Virginia Smyth. Twelve other awards went to individuals who were recognized for services in different areas of work with the aging.

In 1968, the Society held its first of four conferences in conjunction with the State Commission on Aging. The main address was given by William D. Bechill, Administration on Aging, U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare. His topic was "Future Programs for the Aging." He enumerated the great gains made in the field during the previous ten years. The awards ceremony honored a number of outstanding men and women of Georgia. An excellent proceeding with numerous photographs was issued on the 1968 meeting. The president of the 1968 Annual Meeting was Al Horvath.

There were 42 cooperating agencies and organizations listed on the program on the 1969 Annual Meeting. The first general session featured a program dealing with continued involvement in community life, which included representatives from volunteer service, employment opportunities, and activities in clubs and senior centers. A guest speaker was Mrs. Lillian G. Carter, retired Peace Corps worker. A keynote speaker, William E. Oriol, staff director, U.S. Senate Committee on Aging, discussed "Toward a Full Share of Abundance." Dr. Herbert Shore, executive director, Dallas Home and Hospital for Jewish Aged, made a presentation on "What Does the Future Hold?" Six special clinics dealt with a wide range of subjects related to aging.

Approximately 400 persons attended the 1970 Annual Meeting, which again was held jointly with the State Commission on Aging. The conference devoted considerable time to the nine areas of need which related to the upcoming 1971 White House Conference on Aging. A report on the 1970 State Conference on Aging gave the results of the forums on these nine issues.

The Society's 1971 Annual Meeting was held at the same time as the Georgia White House Conference on Aging. The Society donated $500 to cover a reception for the participants and the expenses of older Georgians who otherwise could not attend. An enjoyable drama project, "Yesterday's Children" was presented at the conference.

In 1972 the Society had a new partner, the State Office on Aging. The keynote speaker, Dr. Eric Pfeiffer, associate professor of psychology and project director of the Older American Resources and Services Program, Duke University, had as his subject "Knowledge and Practice in the Field of Aging: Alternatives for Action." A session on implementation of the recommendations of the 1971 White House Conference on Aging asked the questions: What should be done? Who should do it? How can it be done? Proceedings of the 1972 conference were distributed at the dinner meeting at which the theme was "Organizing for Action in Georgia." The consensus of the meeting was that, pending the development of substantial support for a paid staff, the resources which exist within the membership should be utilized. The Society should become task oriented, ad hoc committees should be formed for special functions, and persons with interest and/or activities in gerontology should be encouraged to join the Society.

The 1973 Annual Meeting had a second partner, the University of Georgia. The keynote speaker was again Dr. Pfeiffer, who talked about "Identifying and Removing Barriers." He focused on three specific barriers: 1. attitudinal barriers, 2. knowledge barriers, and 3. organizational barriers. He spoke of methods for removing these barriers. The program was designed to carry forward the consensus development at the 1972 conference. As a result, the work of the four ad hoc committees was featured. The committees were: Needed Services for Older People, Training for Services, Research, and Instructional Programs.

A new format made the 1974 Annual Meeting different. A call went out for professional papers dealing with the following three areas: 1. service delivery, 2. psychological and social science, and 3. physiology and health care. This idea is modeled in part after the format of the National Gerontological Society. At the business meeting it was reported that a part-time executive secretary had been hired. It was also announced that the Society now had an office. Reports were given by the chairpersons of the ad hoc committees.

Important Activities of the Period (1965-1974)

- The beginning of the awards program. The first committee was known as the Recognition Committee. (1965 & 1966)
- Presentation of certificates to the presidents of the Atlanta and Athens chapters. (1966)
- Role and Scope Committee appointed by the president. (1966)
- Society contributed $50 to the Georgia Conference on Social Welfare for annual workshop on aging (1966).
- Georgia: Fact Book on Aging was published with the help of Title III funds and the assistance of the Council on Gerontology of the University of Georgia. (1967)
- Role and Scope Committee submitted a report with six specific recommendations, one being a change in name of the organization. (1967)
- Another recommendation of the Role and Scope Committee was to hold a special workshop meeting to give the Society a new sense of “mission.” (1967)
- A paper on Reevaluation and Setting of Goals prepared by President, Marian Glustrom. (1968)
- At the workshop the aims of the Society were spelled out more specifically than as given in the original bylaws. (1968)
- Participants in the workshop also recommended a change in name to “Georgia Association on Aging.” (1968)
- Society decided to affiliate with the Southern Conference on Gerontology as a cooperating organization in their conference. (1969)
- An ad hoc “Causes” Committee believed the purposes of the Society could be carried out only by two organizations: 1. a professional organization and 2. a grass roots organization. (1969)
- The Ad Hoc Committee described the make-up of the professional organization and listed six objectives. It did the same for the grass roots one listing five objectives. (1969)
- A representative from the Society was appointed to the Legislative Committee of the Atlanta Area Association of Senior Citizens Clubs. (1969)
- The Society moved to support the six-point program of Senator Batemen. These dealt with various ways of helping the elderly. The resolution was sent to government officials and the membership which was urged to contact legislators. (1970)
- An Ad Hoc Committee recommended that the Society sponsor a project to develop a technique of creative expression which reveals the feelings of older adults toward the problems and needs associated with advanced age. (1970)
- Following a talk by a person familiar with legislating in Georgia, the president appointed a Legislative Committee. (1970)
- The Board of Directors approved the creative drama project, a program for older adults to express their feelings through drama. Cooperating in the project were the Georgia Arts Commission and the Georgia Commission on Aging. (1970)
- An agreement was entered into between the Society and Miss Barbara Lebow for the creative drama project. Twenty-one hundred dollars was to be paid to Miss Lebow for conducting and teaching as the director of the project. Title III funds were also made available. (1970)
- The drama called “Yesterday’s Children” was presented three times, once at the Georgia White House Conference on Aging when the audience was favorably impressed. (1971)

- Miss Frankie Adams, chairperson of the Project Committee, submitted a lengthy evaluation of the entire activity. (1971)
- After considerable questioning about the value of and need for the Society, the Board voted in the affirmative. (1972)
- Among Board comments was one saying that the Society should “zero in” on the charter, become a professional organization, and not try to be all things to all people. (1972)
- The Society agreed that it should seek methods of financing full- or part-time paid personnel in order to aid the Society in achieving the objectives in the charter. (1972)
- A resolution was passed at the Annual Meeting that Georgia’s state, county and city governments allocate a portion of revenue-sharing funds in support of service, training, and research so that older persons may live as independently as possible in health and comfort. (1972)
- At the banquet, it was brought out that the Society needs to use the expertise of the organization. It must become task-oriented and all members need to get involved and do something. The group should be professional and proceed as it is. (1972)
- The president, in 1973, sent a memorandum to all members asking them to indicate their willingness to serve on one of the following ad hoc committees: 1. research in the field of aging in basic sciences, 2. needed services for older people, 3. training for service to older adults, and 4. instructional programs.
- There were 56 members who responded to the president’s memorandum. Thirteen checked two committees and one person checked three. (1973)
- The Board outlined the steps to be taken to activate the four ad hoc committees. It was hoped that reports would be ready for the next Annual Meeting. (1973)
- Progress reports from the ad hoc committees were submitted. (1973)
- One of the subcommittees dealing with the development of an information system wrote a report on its activities and the future direction of the subcommittee. (1973)
- The chairperson of the committee on “Needed Services for Older People” gave an annual report on its activities. (1974)
- The subcommittee on development of an information system submitted a report with three recommendations for action. (1974)
- The Planning and Review Committee made recommendations regarding a permanent office and a part-time executive secretary. (1974)
- The subcommittee on practicum education gave a report at a Board meeting on its work which included establishing standards, evaluating experience and certifying persons to practice in a specific area of gerontology. (1974)
- The chairperson of the Legislative Committee reported on a wide range of contacts with legislative leaders. He stated that progress in the General Assembly on matters relating to aging was encouraging.
- A resolution of commendation to the Georgia General Assembly for their concern and attention to legislation pertaining to the aging was presented to the Board. The nineteen members of the Board who were present at the meeting affixed their names to the resolution. (1974)
- A legislative report and look at prospective legislation was sent to the membership. The chairperson of the committee made a complete review of pending legislation on aging and what happened to the priorities of the Society. (1974)

Finances and Membership (1965-1974)

The balance in the checking account as of September 7, 1965, was $655.74. Receipts for the year came to $2828.50, with income from membership dues (190) of $950.00 and a grant from the Georgia Commission on Aging of $1800.00 making up the bulk of the receipts. The expenditures for the same period totaled $2404.17 with the two largest items being $1717.00 as the grant from the Commission on Aging and the 1965 Annual Meeting which amounted to $248.97. The balance in the checking account as of 10/4/66 was $1080.07. Together with the savings account the total assets came to $1534.25.

In regard to the Georgia Fact Book on Aging, the Georgia Commission on Aging grant was $3375.00. The Society's share came to $1125.00. The University of Georgia Council on Gerontology ordered 500 copies for which they paid $1100.00. The $3375.00 came out of Title III funds.

As of September 27, 1967 the receipts for the year amounted to $3818.00 with income from membership dues (199) coming to $995.00 and the grant from the Commission on Aging being $1575.00. The sale of the Fact books brought in $1100.00. Expenditures for the same period were $4259.11 with the two biggest items being the Fact Book ($3146.25) and the 1966 Annual Meeting ($404.99). The balance in the checking account as of 9/27/67 was $638.96. With the saving account the total assets as of 9/27/67 were $1124.49.

At the March 8, 1968 Board meeting, the treasurer reported a checking account balance of $401.96 and a balance in savings of $507.16. He also stated that the 1967 Annual Meeting expenses came to $720.80. The treasurer explained this amount by saying that the Center for Continuing Education in Athens charged in excess of what had been expected. The number of registrations for the conference was only 65. The cost of publishing the proceedings was $267.54. The income from the 1968 Annual Meeting was $2515.00 while the expenses came to $2199.33.

In 1969, the Annual Meeting expenses were $2760.06 compared to an income of $2464.75. The balance in the treasury as of 11/19/69 was $1003.97. The expenses for the 1970 Annual Meeting, held together with the Georgia Commission on Aging, were again higher than the income, which was $2477.00 compared to $2988.63 for expenditures. The balance in the bank as of 10/1/70 was $1514.36. For the year ending 12/31/70, the total income was $3730.89 while the total expenditures came to $3367.95 leaving an excess of revenue over expenditures of $362.94. The bank balance as of the end of the year was $1311.71.

The treasurer's report as of 12/31/71 shows the balance from the first of the year, plus income mostly from membership dues, coming to $2377.98. The expenditures with the big items - Creative Drama Project ($792.00) and State Conference contribution ($500.00) - were $1433.05. The balance in both checking and savings accounts was $15,345.69. In connection with the Creative Drama Project, the grant from the Georgia Commission on Aging was $2374.00, while the Society's share came to $792.00, for a total of $3166.00. The director's salary accounted for $2600.00 of the expenses of the Project with $566.00 for miscellaneous expenditures.

The 1972 file on financial data has only two reports by the treasurer. One is dated June 15, 1972 showing the balance on January 1, 1972 as $944.93. Receipts of a donation of $90.00 and the 1972 dues of $586.00 brought total available funds to $1620.93. Expenditures of $69.92 left a balance as of 6/15/72 of $1551.01. With the savings account, the total assets were $2159.38. The other report is dated December 31, 1972 and shows a balance in November, 1972 of $1570.01. Receipts of $214.00 brought the total to $1784.01. No expenditures were given in the report. In the 1973 Annual Meeting file the treasurer's report as of 12/31/72 showed a total on hand of $2415.63. The income for the 1972 Annual Meeting is given as $1300.00 and the expenditures came to the same amount.

A report on June 1, 1973 gave the balance on November 30, 1972 as $1570.01. Deposits for dues of $1072.00 brought the total to $2640.01. Expenditures of $624.85 left a balance on 6/1/73 of $2015.16. Added to savings the total assets came to $2646.78. The treasurer's report to the Board on November 30, 1973 told the following story:

Checking account (C&S Bank)
Received from previous treasurer	$905.89
Deposits from 1974 memberships	+275.00
Total	1180.89
Savings account (First Federal Bank)	+1656.15
Total funds on hand	$2837.04

At the Annual Business Meeting the treasurer gave the following report (October 9, 1974):

Received from previous treasurer	$905.89
Membership dues received	+1147.00
Total	2052.89
Expenditures	-564.80
Balance on hand in checking account	1488.09
Savings account	+1656.15
Total funds on hand	$3144.24

The average figure for memberships in the Society for this ten-year period is a little over 190. That was the number in 1965. One year later the membership grew to 200 with 49 new members. In 1967 the figure was 204 with 23 new members. In 1968 the files showed 178 by July 8. This was well over two months before the Annual Meeting when traditionally some members renew their memberships. A fair number for 1968 would be 200. The 1968 Membership Committee made recommendations as to the following categories of membership:

1. Individual
 - a. Basic: $5.00
 - b. Retired: $2.00
 - c. Student: $1.00
2. Contributing $25.00 or more
3. Honorary: no dues (to be used in recognition for a person who made a special contribution to the Society)
4. Organizational: $10.00 (open to agencies, service clubs, civic groups, churches, etc.).

The recommendations were approved by the Board of Directors. In 1969 the Society membership numbered 241 with 154 regular, 45 retired, two students, two contributing and 37 regular organizations. The membership then went down for several years with 190 in 1970, 173 in 1971 and 131 in 1972. The following year brought an increase to 201 and in 1974 the figure was 214. For the five years for which we have the information about organizations, the average was about 30.

Leadership (1965-1974)

In the second decade, significant signs of leadership began to emerge from the presidents, the Boards of Directors, and the committees. One important development was the number of new committees appointed during this period. A list of these committees and the presidents who appointed them is as follows:

- Recognition Committee (later the Awards Committee)- President Marian Glustrom
- Role and Scope Committee- President Marian Glustrom
- Fact Book Committee- President Marian Glustrom
- Newsletter Committee- President Kenneth Jasnau
- Ad Hoc “Causes” Committee- President Elsie Alvis
- Committee on Planning Programs and Activities- President Collus Johnson
- Creative Drama Project Committee- President Collus Johnson
- Committee on Planning and Review- President Kenneth Jasnau
- Research Committee- President Roger Carstensen
- Committee on Needed Services for Older People- President Roger Carstensen
- Committee on Training for Service to Older Adults- President Roger Carstensen
- Committee on Instructional Programs- President Roger Carstensen

It should be mentioned that a number of the last four committees had active subcommittees that submitted reports. Much of the work of the twelve committees has been covered in the previous section on “Important Activities of the Period.” One committee, Role and Scope, was reactivated at a Board meeting in 1967. The committee later made a report with the following recommendations: 1. the Society should publish a professionally printed newsletter, 2. the idea of the awards should be expanded with a special awards banquet at the end of each Annual Meeting and 3. the Society should establish a charitable foundation to which tax-deductible contributions could be made. It was felt that through this vehicle special projects could be financed.

In preparation for the workshop recommended by the Role and Scope Committee, the leadership of the president at that time needs to be emphasized although it has already been mentioned. In October 1969, there took place a meeting of the old and new officers which offered opportunities for leadership. Two projects previously referred to require additional notice in terms of leadership. One was the publication of the Fact Book on Aging and the other dealt with the creative drama activity. The latter especially was quite innovative and gave evidence of the growing maturity of the Society. The president of the Society during the year of the creative drama project was Marianna K. Gallops. Another area in which there were beginning stirrings was the legislative scene. The Legislative Committee, with Frank Hughes as the chairperson, gave the Society some insight into what legislative activity requires from those who become involved in its work.

Another aspect of leadership in this period relates to the conflict which erupted concerning the role and place of the Society in Georgia. This conflict was not limited to the second decade but arose a number of times in the Society’s history. Despite pessimism of some of the leaders, the Board of Directors refused to accept the concept that there was no further use for the Society and voted to continue their efforts to make it a meaningful organization.

It has been brought out already that the presidents during the first decade had to function with very limited resources. The same, of course, was true of the Boards of Directors and the committees.

The situation improved very little during the second decade. This means that the responsibilities of the leadership were considerably greater than would be found in an organization able to provide adequate services with which to carry on the organization's work.

In the early years, the Board was known as the Board of Trustees, and it was composed for from 9 to 18 members. In 1968, the name was changed to Board of Directors, and the number on the Board was 20 to 30 members. The Board meetings were to be held quarterly according to the bylaws. In the second decade the attendance at Board meetings is given on 30 occasions with an average for the ten years of 12.2 members per meeting. For a number of years the presidents lauded the dedicated services of the members of the Boards of Directors. In 1974 the co-chairpersons of the Annual Meeting changed the format of the conference by introducing professional papers. The co-chairpersons were John Daniel and Jim Thorson. This departure from previous Annual Meeting programs continued for a number of years.

Revision of the Bylaws (1965-1974)

There were only two revisions of the bylaws during the second decade. These were in 1968 and 1973. There was also a suggestion in the same year that the tenure of Board terms be limited to two. In addition, on September 30, 1970 a reference is made to a constitutional revision committee appointment.

One of the major changes in 1968 was in the name of the organization. This was recommended by the participants in the workshop which took place in February in 1968. They wanted the name to be "Georgia Association on Aging." For whatever reason, this change did not last very long. The minutes of the Board of Directors meeting on January 17, 1969, showed the name to be the Georgia Gerontology Society. Another important change was in Article II on the aims of the Society. The new purposes were given as follows:

1. To initiate, stimulate and encourage action in promoting or developing facilities and/or programs to meet the needs of older people.
2. To act as a medium of communication and to afford a common meeting ground for everyone concerned with the field of aging.
3. To work cooperatively with any group, organization or individual in expanding services, programs, education and research in the field of aging.
4. To encourage interest of the general public in the field of aging and promote awareness of the needs, rights and continuing contributions of older people.

These aims spell out the purposes of the Society in a much more specific manner than did the general ones in the original bylaws.

Article III on Membership was also altered with four categories of members listed: individual, contributing, honorary, and organizational. Sections 2, 3, 4, and 5 of this Article were omitted. These sections had to do with the approval of the Membership Committee, honorary life members, loss of membership, resignation of a member, and reasons for expelling a member.

Article IV, Officers and Their Duties, remained essentially the same. In Article V, Board of Trustees was changed to Board of Directors. The composition of the Board was increased to between 20 and 30 members. The term in office and quorum remained the same, while the duties of the Board were limited to the general management and control of the affairs and funds of the Society. In Article VI, the size of the executive committee was enlarged to include the immediate past-president and four additional members instead of two.

Article VII was a new article about committees. Standing committees appointed by the president were given as: Annual Meeting Committee, Membership Committee, Awards Committee, Publications Committee and Bylaws Committee. Sec 2. Other committees: Other committees, as needed, shall also be appointed by the president. Article VIII (formerly VII): Nominations and Elections Sec 1. Nominating Committee: Instead of the president appointing two of the members, all five shall be elected at the time of the Annual Meeting.

- Article IX (formerly VIII): Meetings of Society (no changes)
- Article X (formerly IX): Dues

- Sec 1. Annual dues- the annual dues for membership shall be established by the Board of Directors. The membership by majority vote at the Annual Meeting may change the dues. The $5.00 figure in the 1964 bylaws is omitted.
- Sec 2. The membership year of the Society shall be the same as the calendar year. In the 1964 bylaws the fiscal year is given as from October to October.
- Article XI (formerly X): Establishment of Local Chapters (no changes)
- Article XII: Foundation (new article). The Society shall establish a charitable foundation for the purpose of securing financial contributions for the maintenance and expansion of the Society.
- Article XIII: Amendment or Repeal (no change).

In the 1973 bylaws the name was given as the Georgia Gerontology Society and the aims or purposes were the same as those in 1968. In Article III Membership, there was a change in Section 2 with the categories omitted and the statement that the categories shall be established by the Board of Directors. It was voted that the categories as presently established by the Board are: Regular, Retired, Student, Contributing, and Organizational. Under Article IV, Officers and Their Duties, Section 2 dealing with Term of Office had an addition, making officers eligible for reelection if properly nominated and elected. Another addition under Section 4, Duties of Officers, gave the secretary the responsibility of maintaining the official files pertinent to the operation of the Society. This section also spelled out in more detail the duties of the treasurer. It made the president or vice president responsible for authorizing the treasurer to disburse the funds. The treasurer, and if he is not available the secretary, shall sign checks upon proper authorization as specified herein.

Article V, Board of Directors, had a new Section 5 as follows: Vacancies: Vacancies on the Board due to resignation or failure to remain a member of the Society in good standing may be filled by the Board to hold office until the next Annual Meeting of the Society. Article VII, Committees, had a new Section 2, Review and Planning Committee which reads as follows: The vice president shall serve as chairman of a Review and Planning Committee, with other members to be appointed by the president in consultation with the vice president. The Review and Planning Committee shall be responsible for reviewing all actions and records as of the beginning of the term of office of a new administration, and making recommendations to the president or Board of directors of the Society within 60 days after the beginning of his term of office. The outgoing and current officers shall make all records pertaining to their offices available to the committee.

In Article VIII, Nominations and Elections, a sentence was added to Section 2 permitting additional nominations to be made from the floor. The third paragraph under Section 2 in the 1968 bylaws was omitted. There was no change in Article IX, Meetings of the Society. Under Article X, Dues, Section 1, the provision that the membership may, by majority vote at the Annual Meeting, change the dues was left out. A sentence was added to Article XI Establishment of Local Chapters, Section 1, to the effect that the chapter program shall be in accord with the purposes of the Society as covered in Article II. Article XII, Foundation, was reworded to indicate the need for action in this type of project. It now reads that the Society may take necessary steps to establish a foundation to further the purposes and aims of the organization. The only changes in Article XIII, Amendment or Repeal, were to leave out the word “repealed” and to insert “without previous notice.”

Third Decade (1975-1985) Annual Meetings

The 20th Annual Meeting of the Society was held on September 29-30, 1975, at the Urban Life Center of Georgia State University. The theme of the conference was "The Future of Aging." The keynote speaker was Dr. Erdman Palmore, Professor of Sociology, Duke University Center for the Study of Aging and Human Development, Durham, North Carolina. Dr. Palmore spoke on the theme of the meeting. In the afternoon there was a symposium on the same subject with four participants, two from universities and two from the field of practice.

Carrying out the same format of the previous year, the Society called for professional papers and divided accepted submissions into the following three sections: 1. Section on Program Planning, 2. Section on Service Delivery, and 3. Section on Social and Psychological Services. The papers in the first section dealt with different programs, including home care, homemaker service, homemaker-home-health aide, and a daycare program for the elderly. The second section covered such topics as social contact and the nutrition process, supplemental services at congregate meal sites for the elderly, a senior council program planning, a widowed persons service, learning through art in a senior center, and a fix-it center. Three of the papers under the third section had to do with various attitudes toward the aging and one attitude on mandatory retirement.

Among the symposia on the conference program were one on the pros and cons regarding preparation for retirement, tapping untapped resources for the aging: fact or fiction; fantasy or feasibility; and developing a community council on aging. A session on hearings on the legislative needs of older Georgians was conducted by the urban Affairs Subcommittee of the University System of Georgia Committee of the Georgia House of Representatives. As a highlight of the Annual Meeting certificates of appreciation were given to the past presidents of the Society. Proceedings of the Annual Meeting were published.

The 1976 Annual Meeting took place on November 8-9 at the Georgia Center for Continuing Education, University of Georgia, Athens. "Working Together- Researcher, Planner, Service Provider, Older Person" was the theme of the conference. Dr. James Peterson, Andrus Gerontology Center, UCLA, was the keynote speaker. There were four symposia: "The Role of Research in Aging," "The Role of Planning in Aging," "The Role of Direct Service in Aging," and "A New Direction in Housing: Group Homes for the Elderly." Each symposium had a number of reactors or participants. Professional papers were presented in the broad areas of program planning, service delivery and behavioral and social sciences. At the business meeting the president gave an address on "The State of the Society." Proceedings of this conference were also published.

The 22nd Annual Meeting had as its theme "Legislation and the Elderly," held in Macon on October 20-21, 1977. In a letter, president Cheryl Schramm stated that the focus of the 1977 conference was on solutions, specifically though the legislative process. She emphasized that senior citizens needed to use their voting powers to achieve successful action in favor of older adults. The keynote address was give by Lieutenant Governor Zell Miller, whose topic was "The Importance of Older Adults Becoming Involved in State Politics." Following the opening address was a presentation and training session on "How the Individual Can Best Impact Legislation." Eight workshops in the afternoon covered such subjects as: homemaker/chore and healthcare issues, transportation issues, funding proposal writing, planning for senior citizens, education and the older adult, how to organize effectively for legislative impact, consumer views of the system and the role of Georgia's legal services in elderly legislation. A message from Governor George Busbee and an address by Dr. Martin Luther King, Sr., featured the banquet session. A panel discussion took place on the second day of the conference with House and Senate members of the Joint Study Committee on Service to the Aged. Nine Georgia legislators, four from the Senate and five from the House, participated in the session.

In 1978, the Annual Meeting was held in Macon on October 9-10. "Rights of the Elderly: Ethical-Legal Issues Involved in Securing More Services" was the conference theme. In her letter of welcome to the meeting, President Jeanne Bartle pointed out that the conference covered issues related to the right to health, the right to economic security, and the right to social participation for the aging individual. The keynote speaker was Dr. George Maddox, director, Duke Center for the Study of Aging and the president of the Gerontological Society. A session on planning for the future involved a discussion of the role of the Society. There were three symposia on the three rights of the elderly mentioned above. The revised bylaws presented at the business meeting were approved. The bylaws called for a major reorganization of the Society with the formation of five sections, namely, Advocacy, Research, Planning, Services and Education, and Training. In addition there was an Aging Coalition as an advisory component of the Society. There was some discussion at the meeting regarding the exact role of the Aging Coalition.

The 1979 Annual Meeting went back to the Center for Continuing Education, University of Georgia, Athens. Its theme was "Planning for the Aging in Georgia." President Ray Avant (in his welcome to the conference) referred to the excitement running high because of the reorganization. He felt that a very promising program had been planned with opportunity for dialogue around significant issues that related to the future of the Society. Dr. Robert H. Binstock, Professor of Law and Politics, Brandeis University, was the keynote speaker. He directed the program in the economics and politics of aging and was also a past president of the Gerontological Society. He spoke on "The Politics of Planning for an Aging Society in the 1980s." A roundtable luncheon on "Reorganization: One Year Later" followed the opening talk. All five sections had special programs, as well as business meetings. At the banquet, T.M. "Jim" Parham, formerly assistant to President Carter and at present Professor of Social Work, University of Georgia, spoke on "The Best is Yet to Be."

On the second day were interesting roundtable breakfast meetings discussing "North and South-Too Big for Our Britches!" This session weighed the positives and negatives of the reorganization plan and the problems of having membership living predominantly in the Atlanta area. Something different was introduced at this Annual Meeting by having a book display made possible by about forty publishers cooperating with the Society by sending books for the exhibit.

Moving to South Georgia, the 25th Annual Meeting was held at Epworth-by-the-Sea, St. Simons Island, on October 8-10, 1980. The theme of the meeting was "Aging Services: Who Benefits? Who Loses?" The keynote address was given by Dr. Carroll Estes, Associate Professor, University of California, San Francisco, and author of the controversial book The Aging Enterprise. Dr. Estes also spoke at the pre-conference session on "The Older Americans Act: A Critical Analysis." Following the keynote address, there were discussions by the Society's sections. There was a report on the section discussions and a response from Dr. Estes.

A special program was a preview of the 1981 White House Conference on Aging. The sections had their annual programs and their business meetings. A highlight of the social life of the conference was the shrimp fest. An unusual feature of this Annual Meeting was a write up in the Brunswick News. It included a statement on Dr. Estes's address and a good description of the composition and aims of the Georgia Gerontological Society.

A new adventure in joint program planning occurred in conjunction with the Annual Meeting of 1981 in Augusta. The Society held a joint meeting with the South Carolina Gerontological Society which was recently organized. "Economic Impact: New Partnerships for the Aging" was the theme of the conference. A joint planning committee with three chairpersons and ten members from each Society worked out an excellent program. As in earlier meetings, there was a pre-conference session which was addressed by Dr. Harold I. Sheppard, Associate Director, National Council on Aging. Dr. Sheppard was also the keynote speaker. There were two sessions of concurrent workshops which covered a great variety of current problems such as: elderly abuse and neglect, block grants, social security trends and future impact, senility, loneliness among the black elderly, and the economics of healthcare.

There were also two concurrent roundtable discussions on subjects too numerous to mention (26). Certainly anyone interested in aging would have no trouble finding a meaningful topic for discussion among the 26 presentations. A film festival was an added feature of the conference. It was obvious from the material in the Annual Meeting file that the joint committee did an outstanding job. This committee along with George M. Dick, president of the South Carolina Gerontological Society, and Brad Courtney, president of the Georgia Gerontology Society, deserve our congratulations.

"Community Partnerships for Aging" was the theme of the 1982 Annual Meeting, which was held at Stone Mountain Inn, Stone Mountain, Georgia. Jude Hagebak, president, anticipated a stimulating meeting in her words of welcome to the participants of the conference. The theme reflects the shift of responsibility to the local level and the effort to resolve the funding gaps. Dr. Robert Hudson, Associate Professor of Social Policy, Fordham University, was the speaker for the pre-conference session. His topic was "The Graying of the Federal Budget and Political Backlash." The keynote address on the topic "Human Services Options for the Future" was given by Jule Sugarman, President and Managing Director, Human Services Information Center. Concurrent workshops covered the following topics: Organizing Community Self-Help Groups, Rehabilitation Services for Older Persons, Painful Partnerships, Aging Connection, A Coordinated Information and Referral System, Older Women in the 1980s, Getting Local Agencies to Cooperate with Your Aging Program, and Private Funding. A special program about retirement was presented by four retirees of the Society. A very timely program was one on "Healthcare Cost Containment." The Honorable Pierre Howard, Chairman, Senate Human Resources Committee of the Georgia General Assembly, spoke on "Georgia Responds to the Shift of Responsibility." Exhibits and book displays added to the interest of the Annual Meeting.

Another trip to the South was required for those who attended the 1983 Annual Meeting in Savannah. That year's theme was "New Perspectives on Healthcare for the Elderly." Both the pre-conference session and the opening session were addressed by James M. Hacking, Assistant Legislature Council, American Association of Retired Persons. The keynote address was on the subject "Medicare: The Coming Crisis." Concurrent workshops on the first day dealt with these topics: Alzheimer's disease, community councils on aging and continuing education: working together, pitfalls and problems in geriatric drug therapy: implementation of the community care act: current status, nutrition needs related to the biology of aging, social security and healthcare: financial stability and future outlook.

There were eight workshops on the second day. In addition there were eleven other presentations in the form of professional papers, a number of which had to do with health matters, while others were on various aspects of leisure time activities. Dr. Herbert Karp, Director, Medical Services, Wesley Woods and Professor of Neurology, Emory University, spoke at the luncheon meeting on the "Future of Geriatric Medicine and Research." The evaluations of the conference were extremely favorable. Again, the planning committee and the president are to be commended for an excellent Annual Meeting.

For the 1984 Annual Meeting, the Society returned to the Center for Continuing Education, University of Georgia, Athens. The program indicates that this conference was in session with the Georgia Association of Homes for the Aging. Its theme was "Aging: Shaping Our Future." The evening before the conference the Educational Playmakers presented a play entitled How Much Do You Love Me. Discussion followed with the actors and the director of the play. Ambassador John W. McDonald, Jr., Coordinator for Multilateral Affairs, Center for the Study of Foreign Affairs, Washington, D.C. was the keynote speaker. His subject was "Aging: Shaping the Future- Perspectives from the 1982 World Assembly on Aging." Concurrent sessions in the morning included two lectures/discussions, one workshop on Alzheimer's disease, one symposium and two panel discussions, one of which was sponsored by the Georgia Association of Homes for the Aging. Afternoon sessions dealt with support groups for spouses of nursing home residents, pet therapy, and the Wesley Woods Center Geriatric Hospital: A Response to an Unmet Need. A panel discussion was entitled "Dialogue Among Providers, Planners, and Bureaucrats." Other sessions covered "Protecting Yourself in the Marketplace," "Marital Relationships of Older Couples," "Elder Abuse and Neglect," and "Aging: Shaping the Future- The State Response." Another panel discussion was on "examining the 1985 Legislative Issues on Aging." At the banquet Vita Ostrander, president, American Association of Retired Persons, spoke on "The 1984 Elections: A Dramatic Demarcation Point for the Elderly- Will It Be a New Beginning?" A silver-haired legislative forum wound up the conference. The Annual Meeting Planning committee with M. Jean Keller as chairperson and 21 other member certainly prepared a broad program of varied subject matter.

In her welcome to the 30th Annual Meeting in Macon on October 9-11, 1985, President Julie Cohn stated that the theme of the conference, "Health and Wellness- Prevention- Education- Promotion" has been designed to reflect both the history of the Society and the new directions of this past year. The exciting mix of academicians, older persons, service providers, planners, administrators, healthcare professionals, and even legislators who form our membership guarantee a stimulating exchange of ideas and promise even more growth for the future. The pre-conference session featured Dr. Kenneth B. Mathey, Regents Professor, Department of Counseling and Psychological Services, Georgia State University, who spoke on "Health and Wellness for Professionals."

The keynote speaker, Donald F. Reilly, Deputy Executive Director, National Council on Aging, had as his topic "Health and Wellness of Older Americans." A new feature of the Annual Meeting was an orientation meeting for new members. Among the workshops were: Respite Care for the Elderly and Disabled, Continued Education in Gerontology for LPNs and Exploration of a Demonstration Project. Another workshop was on the "Promotion of Health and Wellness in a Retirement Community." Among other highlights of the conference were a reception honoring sponsors and exhibitors, the awards banquet and a 30th anniversary celebration. More workshops, professional paper presentations and panel discussions took place on the second day. A luncheon with Georgia legislators, the business meeting, and a review of the Society's legislative issues by the president concluded the 1985 conference. An extra added attraction for the 1985 conference was the annual report by six committees and the two sections of the Society. It was an exceptional and very successful effort to acquaint the membership with the accomplishments of the Society during the year. Three other committees gave their reports at the Annual Meeting. One of the six committees was the new Ad Hoc Communications Committee which was an outgrowth of the retreat held in December 1984.

Important Activities of the Period (1975-1985)

- Legislative Committee reported on five legislative successes. (1975)
- Executive secretary hired; duties and responsibilities outlined. (1975)
- The Role and Scope Committee reported on its concern that the academic areas of the Society were overshadowing the service areas. The groups should get together and support each other. (1975)
- A proposal for expansion of the Society was submitted to the Eckerd Foundation but was rejected. (1976)
- The foundation proposal was sent to six foundations with no favorable response. (1976)
- Legislative Committee compiled data concerning free tuition for the elderly in the University Systems of the United States. (1977)
- Three major groups concerned with older adults formed a coalition. They are the Georgia Gerontology Society, the Georgia Association of Aging Planners and the Georgia Association of Service Directors in Aging. (1977)
- The chairperson of the Legislative Committee presented the Society's recommendations concerning the elderly attending universities tuition-free to the Board of Regents. (1977)
- A position paper on the 1977-1978 Title XX proposed Plan of Services was sent to the Commissioner, Georgia Department of Human Resources, by the above-mentioned coalition. It asked for additional funding for the elderly and made other recommendations, including the idea that the elderly be identified as a separate group. (1977)
- A lengthy statement of recommendations regarding the implementation of Amendment 23 was sent to the Chancellor, Board of Regents, University System of Georgia. The statement included the research done in contacting 21 states that have implemented tuition-free programs for the elderly. (1977)
- Prior to the February Board meeting, copies of a position paper were sent to all members of the Board. The chief recommendation in the position paper was to set up sections corresponding to the five major interest groups, namely researchers, planners, service providers, educators and advocates. (1978)
- The Board approved this concept and a committee was appointed to study the recommendations. (1978)
- One of the recommendations was to establish an aging coalition composed of two members from each section. The coalition would identify issues that need to be considered. (1978)
- At the July Board meeting, the proposed organization was again discussed. The organization chart was presented. It showed the five sections and the aging coalition. Regular membership dues would be $16.00. Each regular member could join two sections. Students and retired adults would pay $5.00. The organization of the sections was described. The section chairman would automatically become a member of the Board of directors. (1978)
- The reorganization plan was incorporated in the revised bylaws which were approved at the Annual Meeting. (1978)
- The aging coalition of the three organizations commended the study committee on services for the aged for its initiatives in the past year on behalf of the elderly of this state. The letter from Jeanne Bartle, coordinator of the aging coalition, also refers to the value of the joint study committee report, which not only heightened public awareness of the problems and needs of the elderly, but also had legislative impact. (1978)

- Reports from the section chairpersons showed that the Education and Training Section met four times, the Research and Services Sections three times each, and the Planning Section met once. (1979)
- President Ray Avant made a statement on behalf of the Society at the United Way hearing, pointing out the need for an increase in funding for the aging. (1979)
- Consensus at the December Board meeting was strongly in favor of the Society's involvement in advocacy. In emergency situations, it was pointed out, the executive committee can approve action in the name of the Society.
- The executive committee recommended that there be no more than four regular chapters representing the various areas of the state. The chapters would have to develop bylaws consistent with the bylaws of the Society. This met with Board approval. (1980)
- In the president's column in the December newsletter, Brad Courtney described the effects of the Reagan funding cuts on elderly programs such as transportation, nutrition, services, training, and others. (1980)
- The chairperson of the Education and Training Section informed the Board that it had prepared and published the Georgia Directory of Educational Programs in Gerontology. (1981)
- The Board approved the recommendation of the legislative committee that the Society register as a lobbying organization. (1981)
- The chairperson of the legislative committee developed a telephone network to provide information when action is needed. (1981)
- A letter from the president was sent to each section chairperson to tell them of their significant role, especially in recruiting members and helping with the newsletters. (1981)
- The Georgia County Welfare Association expressed interest in working cooperatively with the Society on joint projects. (1982)
- The legislative committee shared information and legislative priorities with the Georgia County Welfare Association. (1983)
- The Georgia Gerontology Resource Inventory was prepared and published by the Education Training and Research Section in cooperation with the Georgia Department of Human Services State Office of Aging and the University of Georgia Institute of Community and Area Development Recreation Technical Assistance Office. (1983)
- A letter from Pierre Howard to the president regarding the Community Care Act included this statement: "Passage would not have been possible without the support of concerned citizens like yourself. It was your effort that made the members of the General Assembly aware of the need for alternatives to nursing home care." (1982)
- The Education and Training and Research Sections conducted a survey of the membership to establish a membership inventory, identify resources and expertise among the members and to aid in planning future workshops and activities. (1984)
- The results of the survey show the diversity of the membership and the broad range of training and experience possessed by the members. Many who responded had thoughtful suggestions for future training. (1984)
- The Society sponsored a luncheon at which Janet Bittner, director of the Office of Aging, spoke on the Community Care Act. It was attended by 106 persons. (1984)

- A letter from Governor Joe Frank Harris to the president of the Society expressed his deepest appreciation for her assistance. He said that the success in stopping a reduction in Medicaid was due to her efforts and those of many other Georgians who communicated their views on this issue to key members of Congress. (1984)
- A retreat was held on December 9-10, 1984 at Epworth-by-the-Sea, St. Simons Island, for all current and newly elected Board members. The purposes of the retreat were to orient both old and new Board members; identify and discuss current issues, problems and concerns; review and define goals and objectives; and develop a specific plan of action. (1984)
- Under the leadership of two facilitators, Jan Feiler and Maurice Walker of Savannah, the retreat achieved the following results:
 - a. studied the purpose of the Society and developed a statement of purpose,
 - b. analyzed membership by categories,
 - c. agreed the Society is serving professionals,
 - d. recognized the importance of planning,
 - e. received definitions of planning, need, purpose, goals, objectives, action plan and evaluation,
 - f. reviewed strengths and weaknesses of the organization,
 - g. covered the role of the Board and its composition as well as why people served on Boards. (1984)
- A special all-day Board meeting was held January 2, 1985 to implement the proposed action developed at the retreat. Five work groups were appointed for this purpose. (1985)
- At the March Board meeting, the work groups made reports. The Education, Training, and Development (professional development) Sections made four recommendations, one of which was to conduct a survey of the membership. The group on Purpose and Goals distributed a handout outlining the purpose, goals, and objective. It defined the purpose of the society to serve professional needs of people who work to improve the quality of life for older persons in Georgia. It listed three goals and eight objectives. The membership chairperson reported that she had increased her committee to 23 members with representation from various parts of the state. New members are to receive a questionnaire regarding their interests. Regarding communications, the report included mailouts to members asking their preferences and enclosing a list of officers, Board, and committee members, as well as a copy of the bylaws. (1985)
- John Curtis recommended the establishment of a scholarship committee which would have major responsibility for administering a scholarship fund. The Board allocated $6000.00 to this fund. (1985)
- The chairperson of the Planning and Services Section reported that over 100 persons attended the section's seminar on housing alternatives. (1985)
- The Legislative Committee listed the following issues for the Society for 1985:
 - a. establishing the State Hospital Rate Review Board,
 - b. awarding incentives to families that keep members at home,
 - c. Community Care Act funding,
 - d. training and certifying people providing care in nursing homes and personal care homes, and
 - e. Eliminating mandatory retirement. (1985)

Finances and Membership (1975-1985)

The treasurer's report of 2/25/75 showed a balance in the checking account on 9/30/74 of $1488.09. Deposits of $268.00 made the total $1756.09 and disbursements brought it down to $792.23. With $1746.60 savings in First Federal Savings, the total assets came to $2538.83. The disbursements came to $963.86. As of 9/17/76, the balance in checking was only $265.99. The Finance Committee reported on 9/17/76 that if the Society continued at its present operating level, there would be a $700 deficit for 1977. The committee recommended a dues increase as follows: regular from $5.00 to $10.00 a year and retired and students from $2.00 to $3.00 a year. Organization dues would go from $10.00 to $25.00 a year. This recommendation was passed by the Board. The balance in the checking account as of 10/7/77 was $332.57. The suggestion was made that the newly elected treasurer watch the money more closely and that a budget be imposed on the Board prior to expenditures being made.

In 1978, the checking account balance rose from $1576.92 on 7/14/78 to $1949.83 as of 9/15/78. The following year the beginning balance on 10/14/79 was $1877.97, while at the end of the year it had increased to $2465.94. The Annual Meeting costs in 1979 were $3794.28, while the income came to $3110.00. For 1980, the picture was much better, with income at the Annual Meeting of $2168.50 compared to expenditures of $1216.60, leaving a net excess of income over expenditures of $951.90. From 6/13/80 to 12/12/80 the income was $2896.50 while expenditures came to only $1790.46, a different of $1106.04.

Expenditures for the 1981 Annual Meeting totaled $5760.13, against income of $3214.00, leaving a deficit of $2546.13. The beginning balance as of 12/2/80 was given in the records as $4985.57, with the ending balance as of 10/2/81 amounting to $8549.93. Considering the amount lost at the Annual Meeting, this amount is most surprising and hard to explain.

The previous year the president had agreed to appoint a finance committee with the treasurer as the chairperson. He outlined three responsibilities for the finance committee as follows: 1. look at audit possibilities, 2. consider long term use of funds and 3. recommend a dues structure for next year.

(Editor's Note: It should also be noted that, during this time, the Society failed to pay the annual corporate registration fee to the Secretary of State. The Corporate registration was "involuntarily revoked" in 1981 and was not restored until 1986 when the problem was discovered and rectified by payment of all overdue fees.)

In 1982, the treasurer's report showed a beginning balance as of 12/11/81 of $1016.96. This went up to $3157.10 by 2/28/82 but was reduced to $1735.28 as of 8/3/82. An operating statement from 1/1/82 to 11/30/82 gave the income as $11,639.53 and the expenditures as $10,343.33. The ending balance in checking as of 11/30/82 was $2313.16. The operating budget for the year 1983 showed income and expenditures both at $4500. Included in the expenditures were $1350 for personnel, $1100 for printing and publications, and $600 for sections. All the income was from memberships. The actual operating income for the year came to $4956.59 while the expenditures amounted to $3810.48. The balance in the checking account at the end of the year was $4343.37. Together with the savings account, the total assets were $7787.28. There was an excess of $880.97 in income over expenditures for the Annual Meeting. At an executive committee meeting on 10/4/82, the treasurer and chairperson of the finance committee presented a plan for increasing dues for individual members to $20.00. Retirees and students would pay dues of $10.00. Organizational dues were increased to $50.00. This was approved by the Board.

The income from the 1984 Annual Meeting amounted to $7442 with expenditures coming to $5366, leaving a balance of $2076. The total assets as of 10/16/84 were $8424.64. A third quarter report from the treasurer for 1985 indicated assets of $13,221.10 in the treasury. At the August Board meeting the Board approved a motion to set aside a contingency fund of $4000 that would not be spent, but would be available for any unforeseen problem such as poor revenue from an Annual Meeting. As of 12/5/85 it was reported that the total assets of the Society amounted to $17,605.96. The Annual Meeting of 1985 cleared $2992.77.

Regarding memberships, the files do not give the number for the year 1975. Early in 1976 the executive secretary sent out 975 letters in a membership recruiting effort. As of 9/17/76 the total number of members in the Society was 209 with 29 organizational members. The following year the total again is not in the files, but as of 6/27/77 there were 169 enrolled. The same situation was true for 1978 with the figure of 164 members found in the records. In 1979 the total individual membership came to 211 with 15 organizational members. The file shows a large number of student members that year: 46.

As of 6/13/80, the total membership numbered 157 with 10 organizational members. The following year, the total was 199 with 24 organizational members. As for the sections, the figures were as follows: Educational and Training- 99, Services- 90, Research- 59, Planning-53. In 1982 the membership totals as of 9/29/82 were 174 individuals and 14 organizations. One year later the figures again were 174 individuals while the organizations were 13.

Leadership (1975-1985)

As the large number of important activities for the third decade shows, the leadership during this period was outstanding. The writer wishes to point out that the original list of important activities for the third decade was more than twice as long as the number finally used. Another example of the type of leadership in this period is reflected in the fact that the two most significant activities of the history of the Society occurred in 1978 and 1984, the reorganization plan and the retreat. Another illustration of the leadership role in the 1975-1985 years was the excellent Annual Meetings that were planned. Mention has already been made of the fine work done by several of the Annual Meeting planning committees. One has only to glance through the programs of the conferences in this decade to see that a successful effort was made to provide the participants with a wide range of subjects covered in the sessions of the Annual Meetings. References have been made to the welcoming letters written by a number of presidents to the participants in the conferences. Some of the presidents gave real meaning to the themes selected for the conferences. One such instance was the leadership of Frank Whittington, president, 1975-1976 who helped carry out the theme of "Working Together" in terms of dialogue with older persons. Another example was the leadership of Cheryl Schramm, president, 1976-1977, in connection with the theme "Legislation and the Elderly."

It is not surprising that twelve of the important activities listed for this period have to do with legislative issues. Quite a few of those cut out of the original also dealt with this subject. Much praise is due to Lynne McIntyre for her pioneering work in this field. She chaired the Legislative Committee for a number of years and did much to make the Society aware of its need to get involved in legislative activities. Several of the Society presidents contributed materially to the progress made by the organization in having its voice heard in the halls of the legislative chambers.

Another chairperson who did yeoman's service, this time in regard to membership, was Jeanette Cummings, elected president of the Society for 1985. As Vice President, she gave new meaning to recruiting and servicing new members and has set a standard that will be most difficult to follow.

To those who participated in the retreat and to the leadership carrying forward the important message and inspiration that came out of it, the Society owes a vote of thanks. For years the Society floundered in an effort to determine its role and purpose and the answer came through the leadership which planned and carried out the retreat.

It is impossible in a brief history to give the proper recognition to all who, through their volunteer efforts over the years, have given invaluable service to the Society. This is especially true of the Board of Directors and the many committees without whose services the Society could not have functioned. The research showed 37 Board of Directors meetings with an average attendance of 18 in the third decade.

Until 1974 the Society had no paid staff. In that year the Review and Planning Committee recommended the Society establish an office and hire a part-time executive secretary. The salary agreed upon was $100.00 a month. Nine duties were listed, but only the first four appear practical. They are: 1. recruitment of members, 2. coordination of publication of a quarterly newsletter, 3. coordination of planning for the Annual Meeting and other meetings and 4. provision of staff assistance to committee chairpersons and coordination of work between committees. An executive secretary was hired in November 1974 at $100.00 a month. A record of this person's monthly payments ends with June 1975. A new executive secretary was employed as of November 1975. The minutes of the February 1976 Board meeting have a report from the executive secretary, who had mailed out 975 letters in a membership recruitment drive and was also putting out a regular newsletter. This executive secretary resigned in November 1976. A new one replaced her in January 1977. While it is difficult to be certain about the next two years, the financial reports indicate that an executive secretary salary was paid during 1977, 1978, and for the first month of 1979. There is nothing in the records to show any disbursement to paid staff in 1980. The same is true for 1981, except for December when an agreement was made with an individual referred to as "consultant," who was to serve the Society until October 5, 1982. This person was hired to assist officers and committees of the Society in regard to membership, the newsletter and the workings of the legislative and Annual Meeting committees. The payment was $5.00/hour plus work-related expenses. The financial report for 1982 gave an expenditure of $1650.00 for personnel clerical assistance. Another agreement was entered into in December 1983 for "consultant" services. This one ended October 31, 1984. The scope of services was the same as given for the other consultant. No payments for clerical service were made in 1985. The executive secretaries were Mrs. Louisa Botkin, Sue Nort, and Joan Attaway. The consultants were Blair Forlaw and Suzan Moore Zoukis.

Revision of Bylaws (1975-1985)

1978 The bylaws revision in 1978 was perhaps the most significant of any of the changes made during the life of the Society. The reason for this importance was the reorganization plan setting up five Sections along with an Aging Coalition. The first two articles of the 1978 bylaws were the same as in 1973. Article III was called Organization and replaced the former Article III on membership. Section 1 deals with the Board of Directors and states that the Board “shall have general management and control of the affairs and funds of the Society.” Section 2 is called Society Sections and is the key to the reorganization plan. It sets up five sections as follows: Advocacy, Research, Planning, Services and Education, and Training. These sections shall have the purpose of fostering common interests and pursuing common goals which further the aims of the Society as delineated in Article II. Each section shall be composed of those members of the Society with special interest in that particular area. Each section shall elect its own chairperson and its own representation to the Aging Coalition. Section 3 is on the Aging Coalition. “Under the authority and in consultation with the Board of Directors or the Executive Committee, the Aging Coalition shall be the advisory component of the Society and shall interact with other organizations, agencies and groups.” Article III is entirely new.

Article IV on Membership has two new sections. Section 1 is unchanged. In Section 2 the categories of members are spelled out. They are: organization membership, regular membership, student membership, and retiree membership. Section 3 deals with section memberships. “Each Society member shall automatically be entitled to membership in two sections of his or her choice. Membership in more than two sections shall require an additional section membership fee for each section”. Section 4 on Aging Coalition Membership is as follows: “The Aging Coalition shall be composed of two members from each section. Each section shall elect its representation on the coalition. The Society president shall serve as chairperson of the coalition.” In Section 5 on Voting, in addition to each individual member, each organizational membership shall be entitled to one vote at meetings of the Society.

Article VI covers the Board of Directors. Section 1 on the composition of the Board was changed from 20 and 30 to thirty additional members. The next paragraph is as follows: “Each section of the Society shall be entitled to one designated seat on the Board annually. This seat shall be filled by the section chairperson. In the event the chairperson is a Board member at large, the section shall elect its representative to the Board. Four seats on the Board shall be reserved for candidates nominated but not elected to office in the Society. These shall be one year terms.” These last two paragraphs are new. “The remaining 21 seats shall be filled by Society members elected at large for three year terms with seven to be elected each year.” This paragraph is also new. There were no changes in Sections 2, 3 and 4.

Article VII, Committees, includes the executive committee, the standing committee, and other committees. There is no change in Section 1, the Executive Committee. Under Section 2, Standing Committees, the Finance Committee was added, while the Publications and Bylaws Committees were deleted.

Article VIII is Nominations and Elections. In Section 1, Nominating Committee, the words “one from each section of the Society” were added after “shall consist of five members.” A second paragraph was added to Section 2, Nominations, which now reads: “Two persons shall be nominated for each office of the Society, at least one person for each seat on the Board of Directors and at least one person for each place on the Nominating Committee.” In the third paragraph, the word “published” was added to precede in the call of the Annual Meeting. Section 3 on Society Elections now reads as follows: “Election of officers, Board members, and members of the Nominating Committee shall be by majority vote of the members present and voting at the Annual Meeting of the Society. Election shall be by written secret ballot and shall allow for write-in candidates.” Section 5 on Aging Coalition Election states that “two members of the Aging Coalition shall be elected by each Section majority vote of the Section members present and voting at the Section meeting held at the Annual Meetings of the Society.”

There were no changes in Article IX on Meetings of the Society. Article X dealing with Dues has an addition relating to Section membership. This was an error which was corrected at the next revision. The rest of the bylaws remained unchanged.

Date not specified The next revision of the bylaws did not have any major changes. In Section 2 of Article III, the number of Sections was changed from five to four. The one deleted was the Advocacy Section. Also deleted was the Section on the Aging Coalition. A new Section 3 was on Society chapters reads as follows: “The Society may include the establishment of no more than four regional chapters to be designated as southern, eastern, central, and northern. In order to be recognized by the Society, each group shall organize and develop bylaws consistent with the bylaws of the Society. These bylaws shall be submitted with an application (letter) to the Board of the Society requesting recognition as a chapter.” Under Article IV, Membership, Sections 1 and 2 are the same, except that the order of the categories was changed with organizational membership coming fourth. In Section 3, Chapter Membership was added to that of Section Membership. Section 4 on the Aging Coalition was deleted.

In Article V, Officers and Their Duties, Section 4 deletes the Aging Coalition. Another change occurs in the last two sentences regarding the duties of the president with the term “executive secretary” replaced by the words “clerical assistance.” The revision also gives the responsibility of maintaining the official files and transferring them to his or her successor to the president instead of the secretary.

Article VI, Board of Directors, is the same except for an additional paragraph under Section 3 which reads as follows: “Where official action in the name of the Society is desired, such proposed action must be approved by the Board of Directors. The Board of Directors shall fulfill the advocacy role working for the Society in the politics of aging, to the extent that this is permissible under IRS rulings regarding tax-exempt organizations.”

A change in Section I of Article VII, Committees, deletes the four additional members of the Board of Directors as members of the Executive Committee. Section 2 on Standing Committees was also left out in this revision. Article VIII, Nominations and Elections, has a change in Section 1 which states that the Nominating Committee shall consist of five members elected at the time of the Annual Meeting. The previous bylaws had one from each Section of the Society making up the Nominating Committee. Sections 3 and 4 call for mailed ballots for all officers, Board members, members of the Nominating Committee, as well as the Section chairpersons. In Article X, Dues, the reference to Section membership is properly deleted.

1983 The most important changes made in the 1983 revision of the bylaws were the reduction in the number of Sections and the increase in the size of the Board of Directors. Article III, Organization, reduces the number of Sections to two, as follows: 1. Research, Education, and Training and 2. Planning and Services. In Article VI, Board of Directors, Section 1 calls for 35 additional members instead of 30. Another change deals with the four seats on the Board reserved for candidates nominated but not elected to office. These shall be one year terms, unless the nominee is already serving an unexpired term on the Board in which case that term shall take precedence. In the last sentence, Figure 21 is omitted. Standing Committees are again spelled out in Section 2 of Article VII, Committees. Five committees are listed: Annual Meeting, Awards, Nominating, Finance/Budget and Legislative. It seems strange that the Membership Committee is not given as a Standing Committee. The second paragraph of Section 2, Article VIII, Nominations and Elections, states that the recommendations of the Nominating Committee shall be mailed out to the members of the Society at least one month before the Annual Meeting. In the 1978 revision, this Section required the Nominating Committee to publish its recommendations in the call of the Annual Meeting.

1985 The 1985 revision of the bylaws was for the purpose of putting the ideas and recommendations that came out of the 1984 retreat into action through a change in bylaws. Article II on Purpose, clearly illustrates this effort. It lists twelve purposes of the Society. The first one was probably one of the key concepts that emerged from the presentations and discussions at the retreat. The title of Article III has been changed from “Organization” to “Board of Directors.” Sections 1, 2, and 3 are the same as in the 1983 bylaws. Section 4 on Vacancies is worded differently and gives three reasons why vacancies occur. A new category, life membership, has been added to the four which made up the Society membership. Section 3 on Annual Dues is new under Membership and puts the former Article X, Dues, where it belongs. Article, V, Society Sections and Chapters, has been moved from Article III, Organization. The sections are better defined in this Article. Section 2 also requires the section officers to contact members with appropriate information about section activities. Article VI, Officers and Their Duties, is very similar to the previous bylaws except for two important additions: the vice president shall be the chairperson of the Membership Committee and the treasurer shall be the chairperson of the Finance/Budget Committee. There is a major change in Article VII, Committees: Section 2 has added two Standing Committees to ones given in the previous bylaws and has also given the responsibilities and charge of each committee. The two additions are Membership and Communications. Section 3, Elected Committees, describes the composition and function of the Nominating Committee. An additional duty is given to this committee which will be expected to mail out biographical sketches of each nominee along with their names.

An Overview and a Look Ahead by Louis Newmark

April, 1986

The Georgia Gerontology Society was started because the participants in the forums on gerontology became impatient with just talking and wanted action. The Society was one of the first state voluntary organizations in the country. States like Michigan, Florida, and Texas with excellent programs on aging organized their state voluntary bodies on aging after Georgia. That a small organization with no office, very little paid staff, and a relatively small membership most of the years could continue to exist and accomplish what it did over a 30-year period is a remarkable achievement.

In reviewing the first ten years of the Society, it is obvious that more could have been written about the first decade if the records had been adequate. Because there were no files for the years 1955-64, the material for the Annual Meetings had to be taken from another source. The important activities are mostly from the 1962 president's report and deal mainly with the organization and work of the Atlanta chapter. The finances too were not well recorded or filed. Both the bank balances and the number of members were low in those first ten years.

In the second decade the records made it possible to describe more fully the Annual Meetings and to list important activities of the period. Outstanding was the publication of the Georgia Fact Book on Aging. Another unusual activity was the creative drama project. During this decade, considerable thought was given to the role and purpose of the Society, as well as its composition. A workshop was held for the membership to discuss this matter. A later conflict around the same problem led to the formation of ad hoc committees for the same purpose of doing something that would involve the membership and make the activities of the Society more meaningful. The second ten-year period saw the beginnings of legislative activity. As the Society grew in years, it also made progress financially and in memberships.

Regarding revisions of the bylaws, the only major change in the first decade was the introduction of chapters. In 1968 new aims were written into the bylaws.

There is no doubt that the past eleven years have been, by far, the most constructive and fruitful. The Annual Meetings were all of a very high quality. The programs offered excellent opportunities for learning and participation. The most important activities of the period, the reorganization and the retreat, have already been well covered. The addition of sections, even though the five have been reduced to two, has been a valuable step in the administration of the Society. The last report of the financial status of the organization is astounding. The leadership of the Society during the third decade should be commended for breathing new life into the organization along with materially adding to its resources.

A competent authority from another state, Dr. George L. Maddox, director, Center for the Study of Aging and Human Development, Duke University, North Carolina, wrote in a letter in 1975 to Frank Whittington, then president of the Society: "I was favorably impressed with the Georgia Gerontology Society. North Carolina would be fortunate to have such an organization and leadership.

In reading the 1985 Board of Directors file, I was struck by the early planning for 1986. At a joint meeting of the 1985 and 1986 executive committees held on November 19, 1985, the new president listed ten projects and goals for 1986. It is obvious the Society is looking ahead.

Before concluding this history, I wish to make a number of suggestions that may be added to the list. They are as follows:

- With the Society's present financial resources, it is time to establish a permanent office.
- Again, as funds seem to be available, this would be a good time to hire an executive secretary on a part-time basis (two days a week) at a reasonable salary.
- In view of the great interest and concern regarding legislative activities, a Legislative Award should be given annually to an outstanding legislator working on legislation regarding aging issues.
- The Society should put out a manual which would serve to provide orientation to incoming officers, Board members and committee chairpersons. The manual would spell out, in greater detail that the bylaws, the duties and responsibilities of the above mentioned persons and tell how the various parts of the organization carry out their functions.
- In connection with bylaws revision, the next committee might consider the idea of a president-elect who could also serve as coordinator of the Annual Meeting. Another suggestion along this line would be to add two more vice presidents to the officers. The second vice president could be in charge of the mid-year forum being planned, while the third vice president could be the chairperson of the Communications Committee.
- The history brings out the extent to which the Society was involved in legislative activities. However, most of this action was carried out by the leadership, including the president. The membership doesn't seem to have done much. More could be done to correct this, if only by getting members to write or call their legislators.
- Mention has been made of the inadequacy of the files. It is true that in the late 1970s and 1980s there was considerable improvement. Again, more can be done to make the records more uniform and to eliminate numerous duplications of minutes, newsletters, etc. Perhaps the manual could be used for this purpose.
- Section activities are largely limited to a few meetings.

It is now about six months since the Annual Meeting and the writer has not received one bit of material regarding anything his section is doing. Finally, the writer hopes that the information contained in this history will be of service to the Society and its membership. May the years ahead grant the Society the same kind of leadership it has had in the past, and that the organization may continue to grow and prosper while it dedicates itself to the promotion of the welfare of the aging and aged citizens in Georgia.

Important Activities (1986-1994)

Throughout the decade the Georgia Gerontology Society took pride in promoting and coordinating its work with other local, state and national organizations and programs serving the aging, which has created renewal, growth and advancement throughout the Society. As a result of this involvement, the Georgia Gerontology Society became one of the leading state organizations for Aging Adults in the nation

1986

It was discovered in 1986 that the Georgia Gerontology Society has been involuntarily dissolved as a Corporation in 1981 due to nonpayment of annual Corporate Registration fees. This oversight was, in large part, due to the voluntary nature of Board leadership and the lack of paid staff to ensure continuity of such practices. The reinstatement Incorporation Charter is dated May 1, 1981, and signed by : Julie Cohn, Barbara Payne, Cheryl Schramm, Marietta Suhart, Bradley C. Courtenay, John Curtis, Bert Skellie, Sue Whittington, and Betsy Styles.

In 1986 the Georgia Gerontology Society continued to grow and expand. In addition to its traditional activities, the Society accomplished the following:

- Established a scholarship fund;
- Increased membership by 70%;
- Compiled and printed a history of the Society, written by Louis Newmark, and a chronological listing of awards and recipients 1966-1985;
- Began developing policies and procedures to guide committee and section chairpersons and provide continuity from year to year;
- Held a mid-year forum at Fort Valley State College, Fort Valley, Georgia on June 4, 1986. The topic was “Housing Initiatives for the Elderly: Past, Present and Future Directions.” Dr. Leon Pastalan, University of Michigan Department of Agriculture, presented an overview of housing for the elderly plus a concept of housing for the elderly, egongenic housing, that he was currently marketing. Fifty-five persons attended the forum with 53% of those attending coming from outside Atlanta. Helen Conner served as the Mid-Year Forum Chairperson.
- Provided a pre-conference workshop at the Georgia Council on Aging on “Strategic Planning” with John Carroll and Charlie Goetz of the Atlanta consultant firm, Strategic Solutions Group.
- Created a lifetime membership category;
- Advocated on behalf of older persons. As a result of advocacy efforts of GGS and other advocacy groups, the following occurred in the 1986 Georgia General Assembly: 1. Funding for Alzheimer’s day care programs; and 2. Increased funding of the Community Care Services Program.
- Started a long range planning process for the Society;
- Provided pre-conference intensives to hone the skills of its membership;
- Published a quarterly newsletter;
- Revised and updated articles of incorporation and applied for 501(c)3 status;

- Planned and conducted a successful GGS Luncheon during the 1986 Georgia Conference on Aging.

1987

In 1987, the Georgia Gerontology Society Board of Directors carried forward the work of the previous year's Board as far as working towards establishing a permanent office with a permanent staff member. According to Pick Conner, GGS's 1987 Board president, "This will be the most radical change in the Society since its beginning over 32 years ago. It will affect how we, as members, deal with our Board of Directors, and how the Board responds to our needs. I believe and I trust that this change will make our Board better informed and more effective in their decision-making."

Among the other activities of the 1987 period were the following:

- Published an updated and more comprehensive membership directory;
- Revised and improved the newsletter and put it on a more predictable schedule;
- Planned a Board retreat to provide continuity between old and new officers and Board members;
- Continued work on Policies and Procedures Manual;
- Prepared new and renewal membership packages;
- Developed a computerized membership listing;
- Hosted a management intensive titled "Gerontology: Past Present and Future" in conjunction with the Georgia Conference on Aging, conducted by Dr. Carleton Guptill.
- Planned and conducted a successful GGS luncheon during the 1987 Georgia Conference on Aging. The luncheon was well attended with 263 participants. Dr. Tom Puglisi was the speaker.
- Printed new GGS letterhead and envelopes;
- Updated GGS display for presentation at Georgia Conference on Aging and GGS Annual Meeting.

1988

Assessment of GGS members, section members and Board members was the focus of 1988. The Planning and Services Section worked in cooperation with the Research, Education and Training Section to develop a survey to identify the needs and/or concerns of both sections within the Society. The findings were to be used to assist in planning future activities for each of the two sections. As a result of a GGS Board retreat facilitated by Dr. Walt Denero of UGA, the Education, Training and Research Section was mandated to survey the membership of GGS. Respondents were asked for personal history and their needs as far as training. Board members were continually assessing the financial situation of the organization during their discussions regarding "opening an office." Also, in 1988, a special commitment was made to involve a wider spectrum of advocates or older persons in the Annual Meeting.

Other important activities which occurred in 1988 including the following:

- Recruited members from diverse agencies and organizations and conducted New Member orientation at the Annual Conference;

- Promoted GGS through various agencies' newsletters;
- Contacted other state professional organizations and invited their members, who were interested in aging, to become GGS members;
- Planned and conducted a successful GGS luncheon during the 1988 Georgia Conference on Aging. The luncheon was well attended and the attendees enjoyed the presentation of Dr. Alan Hartley entitled, "Exercising Your Mind and Minding Your Exercise."

1989

During 1989, many significant changes were made in GGS. A permanent office was established in Atlanta on July 16, 1989, which included employing part-time Administrative Assistant Linnie Martin. For the first time in GGS's 34-year history, the Annual Meeting was held in Southwest Georgia. Other important activities included the following:

- Increased memberships by 61% over the previous year;
- Changed membership year from the calendar year to one year from the date of joining/renewing membership in the Society;
- Continued to develop a membership base with broad representation from the different disciplines in gerontology;
- Conducted "New Members Orientation" during the Annual Meeting and Conference;
- Presented the first GGS Scholarship Endowment Fund Award to a Graduate Student in Gerontology;
- Published the Membership Directory;
- Hosted a Hospitality Suite for GGS Members and Friends during the 1989 Georgia Conference on Aging;
- Planned and conducted a successful GGS Luncheon during the 1989 Georgia Conference on Aging. The Luncheon was well attended with 240 persons. Dr. S. Boyd Eaton served as Luncheon Speaker.
- Co-sponsored the American Society on Aging "Mental Health and Aging" Seminar;
- Established the Robert P. Wray Legislative Award to be presented annually to a legislator who has made an outstanding contribution to aging;
- Maintained organizational membership in COAGE (Coalition of Advocates for Georgia's Elderly);
- Held regular Journal Club Meetings in the Atlanta area;
- Initiated plans to re-establish a Speakers Bureau;
- Agreed to present three one-day workshops in the spring of 1990 sponsored by the Education, Training and Research Section and the Planning and Services Section. Workshops would be designed to focus on issues relative to providers of services for the elderly;
- Adopted a three-year Annual Meeting and Conference Site Plan;
- Completed Directory of Gerontological Training Programs in Georgia;
- Developed a professional table-top display;
- Provided financial support for Senior Week at the Capitol, February 6-9, 1989;
- Co-sponsored the Georgia Older Worker Week Luncheon, March 15, 1989;

- Co-sponsored the Georgia Nutrition Council and the South Carolina Nutrition Council Annual Meeting, "Nutrition and Aging," February 16-17, 1989 in Hilton Head, S.C.;
- Co-sponsored the American Society on Aging Annual Meeting and Conference March 18-21, 1989 in Washington, D.C.;
- Announced a cooperative arrangement with the American Society on Aging through which GGS members can subscribe to ASA publications at substantially reduced rates;
- Co-sponsored the 1989 Georgia Conference on Aging May 4-5, 1989 in Atlanta;
- Renamed the Scholarship Endowment Committee as the Student Affairs Committee. The primary purpose of the Student Affairs Committee is to oversee and integrate GGS activities for both graduate and undergraduate students in the state.

In 1990 the following coordinated efforts were carried out:

- Provided financial support for Senior Week at the Capitol, the Georgia Older Worker Week Luncheon held in Macon, and the Georgia Conference on Aging held at Evergreen Conference Center, Stone Mountain.
- Maintained organizational membership in COAGE (Coalition of Advocates for Georgia's Elders) and agreed to participate in the statewide Advocacy Telephone Network.
- Conducted a successful Pre-Conference Intensive on Leadership/Management Skills during the 1990 Georgia Conference on Aging. Also, sponsored the Annual GGS Luncheon with Dr. Robert H. Binstock. Henry R. Luce, Professor of Aging, Health, and Society at Case Western Reserve University, delivering the keynote address on "The Politics and Policies Affecting Aging."
- Hosted a Hospitality Suite for GGS Members and Friends during the 1990 Georgia Conference on Aging.
- Presented two one-day workshops on "Caring from a Personal and Professional Perspective." Over 100 persons attended the workshop in Rome and over 50 persons attended the workshop in Tifton.
- Co-sponsored Senior Speakouts in Albany, Atlanta, Augusta, Gainesville, Macon, and Savannah.
- Continued a cooperative relationship with the American Society on Aging and co-sponsored the September 25, 1990 Regional Seminar on "Comprehensive Geriatric Assessment." Also, continued the cooperative arrangement whereby GGS Members can subscribe to ASA publications at substantially reduced rates.
- Joined the National Council on Aging, Inc. and assisted with promoting and hosting the October 26, 1990 New Directions Seminar in Atlanta on "Senior Center Programming/Administration."
- Presented views concerning issues related to the reauthorization of the Older Americans Act at the Region IV Forum held in Atlanta.
- Submitted testimony on funding priorities for aging services to the Georgia Board of Human Resources.
- Submitted a 1990 Discretionary Funds Program Proposal to the Administration on Aging, "Planning Services for the Aged in the 21st Century."

- Continued to develop our statewide office in Atlanta with the help of Linnie Martin, Administrative Assistant. Purchased computer, printer, and related software; obtained bulk-mail permit and office insurance; prepared Form 990 Tax Return; and conducted Annual Audit of the organization's finances. Increased Administrative Assistant's hours of employment to 20 hours per week and upgraded position to Administrative Director.
- Held regular Journal Club Meetings in the Atlanta area.

The demands of staff duties were recognized with a change in job title from Administrative Assistant to Administrative Director.

- Acquired a volunteer accountant to assist with taxes and reorganization of financial records.
- Published and distributed a quarterly newsletter, focusing on growth in variety, quality and scope of articles. The expanded newsletter improved the services of the society by offering current news from members across the state, statewide news, and GGS activities.
- The Communication Committee, chaired by Linda Garcia, secured sponsors and advertisers for the newsletter, funding the expansion and improvement efforts.
- Co-sponsored the President's Reception during the Southern Gerontological Society's 1991 Annual Meeting and Conference in Atlanta and began to prepare for a joint conference to be held in 1994 in Atlanta.
- Sponsored one-day workshops: "Today's Options for Successful Caregiving" in Augusta and "Aging-Positively!" in Columbus. These workshops were planned and designed by the local community, using local resources when possible and reached 220 persons.
- During 1991 a proposal to the Georgia Legislature was approved to recognize Gerontology Month in Georgia which was later approved to establish October as Gerontology Month.

- With the resignation of GGS' first Administrative Director Linnie Martin, the Board hired Walter Coffey.
- The Society experimented with new methods of raising funds with a Silent Auction, which not only raised funds but established greater camaraderie among the members.
- The Membership Committee, chaired by Kathryn Fowler, established special interest forums for Case Management, Health and International Aging in order to include a more statewide membership in job-specific ongoing activity.
- The International Aging Section met throughout the year to share information and coordinated a presentation on "Elderly Health Care in China" with Dr. Annette Bairan.
- The Membership Committee supported the formation of new chapters in Brunswick and Savannah to promote local networking.
- The Education, Training and Research Section, chaired by Catherine Healey, was revitalized and developed a new mission to provide a network for educators, trainers, researchers, and students to present research projects, to provide educational strategies and resources for staff development, and to promote lifelong learning.

- An Annual Board Retreat was held to develop goals and objectives for the coming year, and special orientation was held for new Board members.
- GGS continued to support regular Journal Club Meetings in the Atlanta area.

1993

- The Annual Board Retreat was held in Atlanta, with each committee and section establishing goals for service and growth during the year.
- GGS maintained membership and advocacy participation in CO-AGE.
- Speakers Bureau was developed and guidelines prepared for those who wished to volunteer.
- The Case Management Special Interest Forum, chaired by Nancy Morrison, conducted regional meetings in many parts of the state, planned a pre-conference intensive for the Annual Conference and conducted training on “Mental Health Functioning of Persons over 60.”
- The new Health Special Interest Forum, chaired by Ellen Smith, drew participation from around the state in developing their Health Partnerships Project with results published through their Extend Your Hand: Don’t Duplicate – Cooperate guidebook and concurrent session.
- The Society co-sponsored a one-day workshop “Relating with Difficult People” with the Savannah Chapter.
- The Awards Committee, Chaired by Lucy Whelchel, developed the Marietta Suhart Award to be presented to the individual who demonstrated ability to educate para-professionals, professionals, and others in the field of aging, as well as provide leadership and vision in gerontology by the development and/or expansion of educational programs.
- The Awards Committee instituted remembrance of deceased members during the Awards Banquet.
- The GGS Legislative Committee was very active and coordinated strong advocacy efforts on behalf of National Long Term Care, as well as local aging legislation.
- GGS supported the regular meetings, network, and training events of the Journal Club in Atlanta, chapters in Brunswick and Savannah, and the Health, International Aging, Non-Profit Management, and Case Management Special Interest Forums. Board officers participated in the chapters and Forums and provided interim leadership when necessary.
- Membership Committee, chaired by Deborah Wilkinson, nearly doubled membership as a result of strong efforts to maintain a statewide presence through training events, the advocacy network efforts, sections meetings, chapter involvement, and targeted training within the annual conference for each of these special audiences.
- GGS continued networking with the American Society on Aging resulted in an ASA-sponsored intensive prior to the GGS Annual Conference: “Angry Older Clients and Families.”

- President Kathryn Fowler coordinated a Transition Meeting for the outgoing and incoming Executive Committees to involve the Committee Section and Chapter leadership for the next year in planning their work for continued progress.

- The annual Board retreat resulted in development of a focused Annual Plan to increase service throughout the State to involve a diverse membership in GGS training, activities, committees, chapters, and interest forums.
- Job descriptions for staff and officers were developed, and each Committee developed a Work Plan and Budget to accomplish its annual goal.
- Special Interest Forums and Chapters were given full voting status on the Board as Sections and Chapters with appointed representatives.
- Attention was focused on the organization and function of the Board as its membership expanded and diversified. To assist with continuity, the Executive Committee created Board notebooks to be distributed annually to all new members. It included the GGS History, By-Laws, membership rosters, and job description for each officer and committee.
- Communication systems were established with the Board committees, chapters, and forums to meet their financial and reporting needs and to guide new groups on GGS affiliation.
- The partnership with the American Society on Aging continued as we co-sponsored the ASA Summer Series on Aging in Atlanta, which was repeated again in 1995.
- The Society hosted a membership luncheon at the Georgia Division of Aging Conference.
- GGS supported the regular meetings, network, and training events of the Journal Club in Atlanta, chapters in Brunswick and Savannah, and the Health, International Aging, Non-Profit Management, and Case Management Sections.
- The decision was made to give up the rented office space in order to save on this unnecessary expenditure. Board and committee meetings had outgrown the space, and the Society was successful in partnering with other organizations for space for those meetings. Administrative Director Walter Coffey was given permission to work from his home.
- GGS purchased new computer/fax/modem equipment and software to maintain our membership rolls and financial records, develop publications and allow our membership to network more easily with our staff.
- Membership rates were simplified to include more conference attendance, chapter, and section membership.

Membership (1986-1994)

1986

During 1986, the membership of GGS increased by 70% (266 paid members). New members were recruited from diverse agencies and organizations. Renewal membership and new member packages were developed, and a "New Members Orientation" was planned to be conducted at the Annual Meeting. A computerized membership directory was also developed.

1987

The Membership Committee for 1987 was composed of 11 members representing all regions of the state. A new membership brochure was developed. GGS membership was promoted in various agencies' newsletters. Membership increased by 15% to 287 paid members, including 39 organizational and 231 individual. During 1987 other state professional organizations were contacted and invited to join GGS.

1988

Membership remained relatively stable in 1988. However, during this year the GGS Board made a special commitment to involve a wider spectrum of advocates of older persons in the Annual Meeting. This resulted in additional workshops of interest to persons not previously involved in the Society. The result of this initial commitment was evident the following year.

1989

Memberships increased by 61% in 1989, to 323 paid members (with 51 organizational and 272 individual), and many factors contributed to this influx. Among the reasons was the greater visibility of GGS throughout the state and the increase in activity this year. For the first time in GGS' 34-year history, the Annual Meeting was held in the southwest part of the state. Activities ranged from sponsoring numerous events to presenting the first GGS Scholarship Endowment Fund Award. This year a permanent statewide office in Atlanta was established.

1990

During 1990 membership was increased to 391 for the first time in the history of the Society. 54 Organizational members and 337 individual members included a broad representation from different disciplines in gerontology throughout the state. The Membership roster was computerized.

1991

Enrolment dropped to 206 members, with 42 organizational members and 164 individual members. The new members recruited when the Conference traveled to Southwest Georgia did not translate into renewals. A database for membership was established in the GGS office and a Membership Directory was prepared and distributed. Board members renewed efforts to recruit members in their home communities.

1992

The Society continued to maintain a membership base of over 196 members: 36 organizational and 260 individual. A strategy was developed to establish interest-specific Special Interest Forums and local Chapters to boost membership and membership services, and Board officers devoted significant time and energy to supporting the strategy.

1993

In 1993 membership increased to 335, with 53 organizations and 282 individuals enrolled. The expansion of services through chapters and special interest forums accounted for most of the growth. A new membership brochure was prepared and Membership Directory distributed. One organization and two individuals enrolled in the new Lifetime Membership category.

1994

Membership grew to 372, with 62 organizational and 310 individual members. A new membership brochure was developed as well as a new GGS display. Georgia Power became a corporate partner to sponsor publication of the Directory. The Membership Committee developed a simplified system of enrollment which allows unlimited conference attendance and membership rates for organizational members and membership in at least one section or chapter for each member and a designate of each organization.

Finances (1986-1994)

1986

Due to the extraordinary growth and increased activities of the Society, the 1986 Finance Committee proposed an amended budget of $9,400.00. An important task during the year was the review of GGS' tax exemption status. As a result, the Society revised and updated articles of incorporation and applied for 501(c)3 status. Other financial activities during the year included securing a safe deposit box for the Society's articles of incorporation and certificates of deposit and transferring a matured certificate of deposit to C&S Banks so that all GGS savings and checking accounts are handled by the same bank chain. Assets for the year totaled $24,627.59.

1987

Income totaled $10,231.30 with the three primary areas of income: membership; Annual Meeting profits; and scholarship contributions. In 1987, membership yielded $5,765.00 while the 1986 Annual Meeting brought $3,065.00. Hence, the total assets for that year, including CDs, were $22,344.46. Expenditures totaled $8,148.93, excluding the annual meeting.

1988

The year 1988 proved to be a very good year with a total income of $16,744.75: memberships increased to $8,035.00 and Annual Meeting profits doubled from the previous year to $7,059.68. Expenses were also lower ($5,115.26) giving the Society a boost in year-end assets to $35,949.66.

1989

Despite the added expense of paid staff (as of July 1, 1989), the Society's upward trend continued with assets totaling $38,634.12. Total cash income was $12,421.04, with memberships at $5,620.00 and Annual Meeting profits, at $5,370.22. With total expenses of $12,697.32 (excluding conference expenses), the increase in the value of 4 CDs accounted for the increase in assets.

1990

Beginning with this year, the Society became more fiscally sound as the finances of the Society steadily increased with growth in membership and generation of more income by the annual conference. Beginning cash balance was $3,394.05, and cash income for the year totaled $23,643.70, with $4,910 from membership, $11,056.63 from proceeds of the annual conference and 3 mid-year conferences. Expenses totaled slightly more than revenue at $26,732.41. By 1990, the Society had over $29,000 invested in three CDs.

1991

In 1991 total income was $36,152, including beginning cash balance of $305.34, memberships of $7,161, and $22,123.08 income from 2 annual and 2 mid-year conferences. Expenditures totaled $27,437, leaving an ending cash balance of $2,322, plus four CDs equal to $25,638.36.

1992

Total income was $52,415.69, including: a beginning cash balance of $2,322.44; memberships of $7509.00; annual and mid-year conference proceeds of $31,600.86; and miscellaneous other sources. Expenses were $39,750.06 leaving a rebuilt checking account year end balance of $10,404 and two CDs valued at $16,391.19. The disposition of the other 2 CDs is not explained in the financial report.

1993

The year 1993 proved to be a growth year with membership fees rising to $12,873 and conference and workshop generating $39,137. With a beginning cash balance of $10,404.04, total income for the year was $66,154.29. Expenses ran only $50,648 leaving a balance of $15,505. The value of the 2 CDs was $17,216.96.

1994

In 1994 income totaled $59,503.90 including a beginning cash balance of $15,505.89; memberships of $9,456, training proceeds of $32,605.50, and other miscellaneous income. Expenses totaled $48,487 leaving a balance of $11,016 plus 2 CDs with combined value of $17,995.

Annual Meetings (1986-1994)

During the fourth decade the Annual Meetings continued to be the highlight in the life of the Society, offering opportunities to coordinate with other organizations, to broaden the impact of the Society by being more inclusive and to enable members with diverse interests and areas of expertise to interact and network

1986

The 31st Annual Meeting was held October 1-3, 1986 at Unicoi State Park in Helen, Georgia. The conference theme, “The New Elderly: A Challenge for Change,” was reflected in all aspects of the conference from the two pre-conference intensives- “Marketing Aging Programs” and “Destroying Old Stereotypes: Gaining New Perspectives”- to innovative concurrent sessions like, “A Unique Approach: Churches and Communities Working Together,” or “Housing Alternatives for a Changing Society.” The keynote address- “From Generation to Generation: Generating New Ways of Living”- was presented by Mildred Seltzer, Ph.D., Director of Education and Training, Scripps Foundation Gerontology Center and Professor, Department of Sociology and Anthropology, Miami University, Oxford, Ohio. One of the highlights of the 31st Annual Meeting was Oktoberfest.

1987

The 32nd Annual Meeting was held October 7-9, 1987 at the Chamblee/Dunwoody Holiday Inn in Atlanta, chaired by Cathie Berger. The conference theme was, “Multiple Choices: An Examination of the Options.” Keynote symposia, introducing the three tracks of the program, represented a new feature. The keynote symposia were followed by 24 concurrent sessions arranged within the tracks. Ms. Elaine Brody was the keynote speaker for the Plenary Session and Dr. Paul Kershner was the guest speaker at the Closing Luncheon. Ten organizations placed ads in the Annual Meeting program and there were 23 exhibitors.

1988

The 33rd Annual Meeting was held October 5-7 1988 at the Holiday Inn West, Augusta, Georgia, with Ronald Schoeffler serving as chair. The conference theme, “Synergy: Power for the Future,” was reflected in both the Opening Plenary Session- “Introduction to Synergy” and in the keynote address- “The Elderly: Our Link with the Past”- which were both presented by Irene Burnside, internationally known teacher, writer and speaker. Three pre-conference intensives included: Church, Synagogue, and Community: A Statewide Model for Continuing Education Training in Religion and Aging; Georgia Silver Hair Legislature Forum: Legislative Advocacy; and Grant Writing Workshop. Highlights of this conference were the President’s Reception and “Princess Augusta” Riverboat Cruise/Dance on the Great Savannah River and the Awards Banquet at the Sacred Heart Cultural Center.

1989

The 34th Annual Meeting was held October 4-6, 1989 at the Heritage House Hotel, Albany, Georgia, chaired by Virginia Griffin. The conference theme, "Aging: Make It A Good Life," combined the positive aspects of aging with the site of the Annual Meeting- "Albany, the Good Life City," since this was the first time GGS held the annual conference in Albany. The keynote session, "Samantha Rastles the Woman Question," was a one-woman performance featuring Jane Curry. Three pre-conference intensives featured: Clergy and Aging Collaboration; Alzheimer's Disease; and National Health Insurance- A Panel Discussion, which was presented by the Georgia Silver Haired Legislature. The Closing Brunch featured guest speaker Fred McGinnis, Director of the DHR Office of Aging. The President's Reception, held at the Albany Museum of Art, was one of the highlights of the conference.

In 1990 the 35th Annual Meeting was held at the Georgia Center for Continuing Education in Athens with over 250 members in attendance. The conference, chaired by Kathryn Fowler, had as its theme "Aging- Visions for the '90s." Dr. Paul Kerchner, Senior Vice President of the National Council on Aging, Inc. gave the keynote address- "Visions for the Nineties." Pre-conference intensives focused on legal and ethical considerations in decisions on medical treatment, creative interventions, and positive solutions to working with older clients. The Silver Haired Legislature also held a pre-conference session.

Marietta Suhart chaired the program committee and developed concurrent workshops which covered a wide variety of topics including long term care, evaluation of in-home services, legal and financial issues of the '90s, managing stress, adult day care and Alzheimer's disease. Orientation of new members was held in addition to the Annual Meeting, and the President's Reception was held in the Conservatory of the State Botanical Garden.

The 36th Annual Meeting was held October 9-11, 1991 at the Sheraton Savannah Resort Hotel, Savannah, Georgia, chaired by Sherrie Abbot and Marian Conway. The theme- "Sailing Into Successful Aging- Who Said It's a Breeze," set the stage for the conference to focus on policies, programs, trends, and resources as they impact on the broad range of issues and concerns of older Georgians. The keynote address and closing address were given by Dr. JoAnn Cannon, President of Inward Bound Ventures, a professional trainer in the wellness movement. In addition to a wide variety of intensives and workshops, the conference focused on individual and community resources for meeting the needs of older persons. New member orientation, the Annual Business Meeting and the annual Award Banquet were also held during the conference.

On October 18-20, 1992 the 37th Annual Meeting of GGS was held at the Hilton Hotel, Columbus, co-chaired by Gary Arthur, Cindy Ford, and Meg Bradley. The theme, "Being the Best You Can Be," focused the conference on meeting the needs of older Georgians physically, mentally and spiritually. The keynote address was given by Dr. Mary S. Harper, Coordinator for Long Term Care, National Institute of Mental Health who spoke on “Helping Yourself to Good Health.” Two other outstanding speakers were Max Cleland, Georgia’s Secretary of State, and Hope Mihalap, a nationally-acclaimed humorist. In addition to extensive exhibits, a very successful silent auction was held as a fundraiser, and the Awards Banquet highlighted professionals and non-professionals.

The 38th Annual Meeting was held at Epworth-by-the-Sea on September 29-30 and October 1, 1993 with the theme “Generation to Generation: Bridging the Spectrum” was attended by approximately 260 persons. The Program Committee, chaired by Mary McKinnon, developed a program utilizing tracks around the program theme. The Logistics Committee, chaired by Deborah Wilkinson, coordinated local arrangements, registration, special events, and exhibitors/advertisers and budget with the Program Committee. The conference was a success due to the efforts of the committee members both in Atlanta and the coastal area. The work done by the members of the two chapters located in Savannah and Glynn County was invaluable.

On the day preceding the conference a full day intensive on “Angry Older Clients” and a half day intensive on “Creative Techniques for Successful Program Management” were held. The keynote address, “Generation to Generation” was given by Kathleen Kennedy Townsend, J.D., Founder and Executive Director of the Maryland Student Service Alliance which helps young people serve their community. Dr. Sally Newman, Executive Director of Generation Together, University of Pittsburg, gave the closing address on “Intergenerational Programs.” This year was the first year that all registrations and bill paying were handled out of the central office. The Annual Meeting and Conference Committee developed a notebook with samples of information helpful in the development of a GGS Annual Meeting to be shared with the committee for 1994.

The 39th Annual Meeting was held September 11-13, 1994 at Unicoi State Park, Helen, Georgia, was chaired by Linda Garcia and Pat Viles Freeman. The keynote address was delivered by Judy Baskins, Director of Palmetto Senior Center, Columbia, South Carolina who described “The Pace Initiative” a Long Term Care Capitation Model. The closing address was given by Terence Kay, author of the best selling novel, To Dance With the White Dog. Two well attended half-day intensives preceded the conference entitled “Innovative Approaches to Case Management” and “Why Health Care Reform- Why Now.” A wide variety of subjects in health care, elder abuse, incontinence, spirituality, injuries and safety, gay and lesbian elderly, wellness, elder rights, and successful aging were covered by the very successful concurrent sessions. The Health Section promoted daily morning health walks and also a Health Section Breakfast to promote increased interest in education and research, as well as service planning and delivery in aging. One of the highlights of the conference was a most enjoyable evening with the incomparable actress Carol Mitchell Leon.

Revisions of the Bylaws (1986 – 1994)

After a decade without revision, the ByLaws were completely reviewed and extensively revised to simplify the format, to allow for growth of membership activities throughout the state, and to define the work of the Board committees.

1989

The “Georgia Gerontology Society Student Scholarship” was renamed the “Dr. Robert P. Wray Student Scholarship” and the “Dr. Robert P. Wray Legislative Award” as the “Georgia Gerontology Society Legislative Award.”

1991

Bylaws were extensively revised to allow for Special Interest Forums and to expand the role of the Communication Committee to update GGS History.

1994

Special Interest Forums were given full status as Sections with Board representation, Chapters were given full status with Board representation, the system of terms and rotations was simplified and the work of various committees was defined.

Important Activities (1995-2004)

1995

GGS celebrated its 40th year with a variety of educational activities and networks which operated throughout the state. Highlights of the year:

- A Strategic Planning Retreat, facilitated by Lucy Whelchel, examined the Society's future directions and developed priorities.
- Four active sections met in local communities and at the statewide conference: Case Management; Education, Training & Research; Health; and International Aging.
- Two active chapters met in Savannah/Chatham County and in Brunswick/Glynn County.
- Continued membership growth reached our goal of exceeding 400 members.
- The Awards Committee, chaired by Kathryn Fowler, created a complete history of GGS Awards and all Award winners for which written records could be located.
- The Awards Committee recognized GGS Founders with special plaques and published biographical information and pictures of those for whom the awards were named in the Awards Program for the 40th Anniversary Celebration.
- The Student Affairs Committee, chaired by Dr. Nancy Kropf, hosted a student luncheon with the financial support of Jewish Social Services in Atlanta and coordinated free attendance at the annual conference for the students winning scholarship and paper presentation awards.
- The Savannah Chapter, chaired by Louis Heyward, sponsored a workshop "Linking Generations" and held a Christmas luncheon to raise funds for a local family.
- The Glynn Chapter, chaired by Patricia Whitmore, held quarterly meetings featuring different agencies in the community to share information and network effectively.
- The Legislative Committee, co-chaired by Ellie Crosby and Allan Goldman, updated its mission and function, resulting in a name change to Legislation and Public Policy Committee.
- The Legislation and Public Policy Committee co-sponsored the "Buck Stops Here Campaign" to reach state legislators, and co-sponsored the GGS Day at the Capitol.
- The Legislation and Public Policy Committee presented an advocacy workshop at the GGS Annual Conference and at the Athens Community Council on Aging.
- GGS maintained an organizational membership in CO-AGE and coordinated advocacy efforts with CO-AGE priorities.
- GGS worked with the Georgia Council on Aging, the Georgia Division of Aging Services, and the Atlanta Regional Commission to develop and administer an advocacy contract to monitor the work of the Georgia General Assembly and publish the Senior Issues Newsletter.
- GGS produced and distributed quarterly GGS newsletters to the membership under the guidance of the Communications Committee, co-chaired by Catherine Ivy and Barbara McBrayer-Brice.
- The Communications Committee published a special GGS newsletter which was used in conjunction with the American Society on Aging annual conference in Atlanta.
- The Communications Committee published an updated Society history, adding the 1985 – 1995 period to Louis Newmark's history of the first three decades.

- The Health Section, co-chaired by Diane Manheim and Marsha Jaroch, partnered with the Georgia Geriatrics Society for a pre-conference intensive.

1996

The Board plan of work resulted in numerous accomplishments:

- Board strategic planning resulted in the approval of a new mission statement and the adoption of a new slogan: Promoting Quality Leadership in Aging.
- The Executive Committee produced a Policies and Procedures Manual which established financial, personnel, Board, committee, chapter, and section policies and procedures necessary for smooth and legal operation as the Society grows and diversifies.
- Employed David Pollan as the part the attorney for the Senior Advocacy Project.
- New sections were encouraged with Board outreach and development of a Fact Sheet on how to start a Section. Individual officers worked to support members' efforts to start a Long Term Care Section and a Private, Non-Profit Administrator's Section.
- New Chapters were encouraged, and a Fact Sheet on how to start a Chapter was made available.
- The Advocacy & Public Policy Committee, co-chaired by Ellie Crosby and Allan Goldman, conducted an advocacy workshop for the Central Savannah River AAA and assisted with the planning of the 2nd Annual Summit Meeting of the Georgia Coalition on Aging & Disabilities.
- GGS continued to work with CO-AGE to identify and support legislative and funding priorities with the Georgia General Assembly.
- The Silent Auction at the Annual Conference raised money for the Senior Advocacy Project.
- The Awards Committee, chaired by Kathryn Fowler, solicited nominations and coordinated the Awards program at the Annual Conference to recognize professional, older adults, GGS service, education, legislative, and meritorious service.
- The Communications Committee, co-chaired by Catherine Ivy and Sandra Lieberman, added new columns and columnists to the newsletter, re-named "The Society Pages."
- The Communications Committee developed a marketing packet for newsletter sponsorship and advertisement.
- The Membership Committee, chaired by Cathie Berger, hosted the GGS luncheon at the Georgia Conference on Aging with speaker Gerald Durley, Ph.D., the director of the Health Promotion Resource Center of the Morehouse School of Medicine and Co-Director of the Atlanta Interfaith Health Project at the Carter Center.
- The Membership Committee developed packets for Board members to utilize in recruitment in their hometowns.
- The Case Management Section, co-chaired by Lucia Comer and Catherine Ivy, continued to hold area meetings throughout the state and conducted a lunch and learn workshop on guardianship, Probate Court, and Adult Protective Services.
- The Health Section, co-chaired by Doris Kittle and Julia Johnson, published The Geriatric Assessment Tool Book.
- The International Aging Section, chaired by Ann Dandridge, celebrated Chinese New Year and participated in international events in Atlanta.
- The Education, Training, and Research Section, co-chaired by Nancy Gabrielsen and Margaret Caufield, surveyed its membership concerning backgrounds and interests. Among other things learned was the diversity of the Section, with 46% working in private nonprofit organizations and 32% in colleges or universities.

1997

With Board committees, chapter, and sections active, the following were highlights of the year:

- The Communications Committee brought a new look to the Society's quarterly newsletter, returning to the name "In Focus," expanding its scope, content, and format.
- The Awards Committee, co-chaired by Cliff Burt and Vicki Pilgrim, solicited nominations and coordinated the Awards program at the Annual Conference to recognize professional, older adults, GGS service, education, legislative, and meritorious service.
- The Legislation and Public Policy Committee, co-chaired by Ellie Crosby and Allan Goldman, provided direction for 2 part-time attorneys in the Senior Advocacy Project to monitor the Georgia Legislative Session and prepare weekly publications of the Senior Issues Newsletter.
- The Legislation and Public Policy Committee worked closely with CO-AGE to include GGS members in adopting and advocating for state legislative priorities and monitored and reported on federal issues related to Medicare solvency, the Balanced Budget Amendment, health insurance portability and the Older Americans Act.
- The Membership Committee, chaired by Sandra Lieberman, surveyed the membership which provided input to the Society on priorities: more opportunities for networking, with special interest in the areas of management, business issues, advocacy, and state-of-the-art programs.
- The Student Affairs Committee, co-chaired by Jill Hayes and Pick Connor, sponsored the Student Luncheon during the annual meeting, and conducted the application and selection process for the Wray Scholarship and the Graduate and Undergraduate Paper Awards.
- The Case Management Section, co-chaired by Glenda Gandy and Mary Lou Vergara, convened regional meetings and sponsored four educational meetings at Piedmont Hospital in Atlanta to focus on service models of Case Management.
- The Case Management Section's network meetings resulted in a plan to evaluate Case Management Certification options, organize study groups, and arrange for testing.
- The Health Section, co-chaired by Fran Perrault and Ellen Smith, partnered with ProHealth Seniors Task Force to sponsor a breakfast meeting with Dr. John Banja, a medical ethicist, to address ethical issues in managed care.
- The Education, Training and Research Section, co-chaired by Nancy Gabrielson and Margaret Caufield, sponsored a lunch and learn on "Program Marketing Techniques" at the conference.
- The Long Term Care Coalition became a GGS Section in 1997 and continued its traditional lunch and learn series with Dr. Jim Cooney discussing the Georgia Coalition for Health in March and the Georgia Medical Care Foundation providing an overview of managed care programs in July.
- The Non-Profit Management Section, chaired by Kathryn Fowler, became an official GGS Section in 1997 after meeting at the GGS Conference since 1995. Representatives from 16 organizations joined for quarterly opportunities for networking, consulting with one another on issues relevant to their agencies, developing collaborative partnerships for reducing operating costs, and providing technical assistance with implementation of federal and state initiatives.
- The Savannah/Chatham Chapter, chaired by Louis Heyward, collaborated with AARP to organize the Georgia Senior Expo and held quarterly meetings to provide members with legislative updates, discuss topics of interest, and involve new members.

The board officers lead committees, sections, and chapters in a very active year:

- The Georgia Gerontology Society Scholarship Fund was formally launched at the 1998 Annual Meeting to provide scholarships for graduate study in gerontology, leadership development in the field of aging and advanced training to enhance services to older adults. The Fund was begun by the Scholarship Fund Committee, chaired by Cathie Berger, with initial contributions from GGS Founder Virginia Smyth and Board members, and is administered by The Community Foundation for Greater Atlanta, Inc. A goal of $50,000 was set.
- The Advocacy and Public Policy Committee, co-chaired by Becky Kurtz and Allan Goldman, continued to provide direction for the Senior Advocacy Project
- GGS participated strongly in statewide advocacy efforts on GGS-identified issues and on those legislative priorities adopted through participation in CO-AGE.
- The Awards Committee, chaired by Cliff Burt, established a new Case Management Award, named in honor of Dan Hickman, to be given for the first time in 1999.
- The newly-formed Development committee, chaired by Maureen Kelly, expanded opportunities for sponsorships, exhibits, and advertising during the Annual Meeting and established new relationships among the public, non-profit, and private sectors serving older adults.
- With the support of the Development Committee, a new Section for Business and Aging was established during 1998.
- The Student Affairs Committee, co-chaired by Jill Hayes and Mary MacKinnon, sponsored the student luncheon during the annual meeting and held a “Career Information Exchange” prior to the conference opening session. The Exchange, sponsored by AARP and Jewish Family and Career Services, included 10 roundtable discussion centers with representatives of various aging fields at each table.
- The Case Management Section held networking meetings three times during the year and sponsored a workshop at the Annual Meetings.
- The Case Management Section also held area meetings in Atlanta, Athens, and Macon. In Atlanta, the Section examined the case management models in hospice and managed care settings and held a training session on the use of assessment tools. In Athens and Macon, the Section reviewed the use of assessment tools, discussed CCSP and legislative issues.
- In Focus newsletter was published quarterly by the Communications Committee, co-chaired by Vicki Pilgrim and Bard Lindeman.
- Georgia Power again published the Membership Directory.
- The Health Section, chaired by Fran Perrault and Ellen Smith, sponsored two networking and education breakfasts in collaboration with the ProHealth for Seniors Task Force which reached 60 to 80 individuals. Dr. Rao, a Grady Hospital physical, made a presentation on the emergence of multi-culture aging as an important issues in Georgia, and Margo Geller presented “Growing older and wiser: Addressing depression by building self-esteem.”
- The Multi-Cultural Aging Section (re-named from International Aging) coordinated a well-attended Annual Conference seminar with 11 speakers speaking about aging in their countries and sponsored students from 20 countries who attended the President’s Reception.
- The Long-Term Care Section continued its lunch and learn programs and presented an Annual Conference workshop, “Planning for your Long Term Care, NOW!”
- The Non-Profit Management Section, chaired by Kathryn Fowler, held quarterly meetings with 14 participating agencies, focusing on issues including personnel policies and regulations, the establishment of food buying cooperatives, fund-raising, and financial accounting software packages. Members shared information concerning current issues such as transportation unification, the new state reporting requirements, changes due to consolidation of areas, health insurance plans, home care licensure, and legislative issues affecting non-profits.

1999

Board officers lead the membership in the following activities:

- The Awards Committee, chaired by Cliff Burt, gave the first Dan Hickman Case Management Award at the Annual Conference.
- The Awards Committee solicited nominations and coordinated the Awards program at the Annual Conference to recognize professional, older adults, GGS service, education, legislative, and meritorious service.
- The Advocacy and Public Policy Committee, co-chaired by Becky Kurtz and Allan Goldman, remained active in CO-AGE, sending advocacy alerts to the membership, and providing direction for the Senior Advocacy Project.
- The Development committee's attention to sponsorships, exhibits, and advertising during the Annual Meeting increased participation with new partners in the public, non-profit, and fast growing private sector serving older adults.
- The Scholarship Fund continued to grow, ending the year with a $25,000 balance. It was administered by The Community Foundation for Greater Atlanta.
- The Student Affairs committee conducted paper and scholarship competitions, awarding two graduate paper awards and the Robert P. Wray Scholarship at the annual meeting.
- The Communications Committee published the quarterly newsletter, In Focus.
- The Case management Section held network meetings and coordinated a special program with case managers of Visiting Nurse Health System on "Person-Centered" Case Management.
- The Health Section, chaired by Nancy White and Bonnie Smith, published an updated Geriatric Assessment Tool Book and Senior Community Success Stories booklet.
- The Business & Aging Section met 3 times and considered plans to share resource lists with business partners and develop relationships with the Society of Human Resources Managers.
- The Multi-Cultural Section held a program on "Multi-Cultural Competence in Health Care" with Dr. Ruth Garrett at Armstrong Atlantic State University.
- Georgia Power continued to sponsor printing of the Membership Directory.
- The Non-Profit Management Section, chaired by Norman Graves, held quarterly meetings with 14 participating agencies, focusing on issues including financial accounting software, audit firms, Board recruitment and function, and coordinated transportation.

2000

- The Student Affairs Committee, co-chaired by Jill Hayes and Mary MacKinnon, raised an all-time high of $3,000 for the Scholarship Fund with a Silent Auction at the Annual Conference.
- The Advocacy and Public Policy Committee, co-chaired by Becky Kurtz and Allan Goldman, administered the Senior Citizens Advocacy Project, supervising attorneys Joleen Neel and Janice Barrocas in monitoring the General Assembly and publishing Senior Issues Newsletter.

- The Advocacy and Public Policy Committee identified and proposed advocacy adopted by the GGS Board, including osteoporosis education and assistive technology funding, and provided testimony to the Blue Ribbon Task Force on Home and Community-Based Services.
- A full audit was completed with no deficiencies.
- The Student Affairs/Scholarship Fund Committee grew the Fund with Board and member solicitation, a Summer Brunch fundraising event, and the Silent Auction. By year-end, the Fund reached a balance of $33,500.
- The Student Affairs Committee conducted the call for papers for undergraduate and graduate students and issued a call for Robert P. Wray Scholarship applications, with announcements of all awards held at the Annual Conference.
- The Awards Committee, chaired by Kathleen Ernce, solicited nominations and coordinated the Awards program at the Annual Conference to recognize professional, older adults, GGS service, education, legislative, and meritorious service.
- The Communications Committee, chaired by Ken Mitchell, continued to publish In Focus with Sandra Lieberman as editor and began to investigate setting up a GGS website.
- The Membership Committee, chaired by Kay Hind, published the Membership Directory, again printed by Georgia Power Company.
- The Business & Aging Section, chaired by Maureen Kelly, developed sponsorships for the Annual Conference and recruited business representatives to the Board.
- The Case Management Section, chaired by Gail Bechtel, continued to hold local area network meetings in Macon and Atlanta.
- The Non-Profit Management Section, chaired by Norman Graves, held quarterly meetings with 10 participating agencies, focusing on joint educational, financial, personnel, and management concerns.
- The following Sections continued to be active during the year: Education, Training and Research, chaired by Judith Stillion; Health, chaired by Nancy White; Multi-Cultural Aging, chaired by Yolanda Hallas; and Long-Term Care, chaired by Ken Workman.

2001

- The Advocacy and Public Policy Committee, co-chaired by Ellie Crosby and Judith Stillion, administered the Senior Citizens Advocacy Project, with attorney Janice Barrocas continuing as coordinator.
- The Advocacy and Public Policy Committee participated in CO-AGE and engaged GGS members in advocacy efforts throughout the year.
- The Awards Committee, chaired by Kathleen Ernce, solicited nominations and coordinated the Awards program at the Annual Conference to recognize professional, older adults, GGS service, education, legislative, and meritorious service.
- The Development Committee, co-chaired by Carol Wisdom and Barbara McBrayer-Brice, expanded its membership to include persons from future conference cities, increased GGS Board contributions, increased advertisers, and planned fundraising jointly with the Scholarship Committee.

- The Development Committee raised more than $26,000 for GGS, including support from major sponsors: Georgia Power company, Coca-Cola Company, Southern Home Care, Piedmont Hospital Sixty-Plus Program, Pfizer, AARP, and Home Nurse, Inc.
- The Membership Committee, chaired by Ed Lucas, targeted recruitment and increased membership this year. Georgia Power once more sponsored the printed Membership Directory.
- GGS increased its support for students, with award winners presenting their research at a special Annual Conference luncheon
- The Scholarship Fund Committee raised more than $7,000 for the Scholarship Fund with the annual Silent Auction.
- A revitalized Long-Term Care Section, chaired by Cheryl Schramm, organized four educational workshops on issues such as the Olmstead Decision and End of Life Planning.
- The Education, Training, & Research Section, chaired by Barbara Karcher, completed an inventory of gerontological research in Georgia's colleges and universities. The CAREing Center of Kennesaw State University compiled the results and AARP printed the report.
- The Multi-Cultural Aging Section, chaired by Yolanda Hallas, organized a session on diversity at the Annual Conference and produced a summary report for our membership.
- The Non-Profit Management Section, chaired by Norman Graves, began to meet with the leadership of the Georgia Association of Homes and Services for the Aging, which was considering creation of a Home and Community Based membership which might provide Section members with more management-specific training, resources, and advocacy support than GGS could provide under its current structure.
- In cooperation with Georgia State University Gerontology Alumni group, the Membership Committee held a workshop on alternative medicine, sponsored by Piedmont Hospital Sixty-Plus.
- The Business & Aging, Case Management, and Health Sections were inactive due to the absence of leadership. Case Management groups continued to meet in Macon and Atlanta.

- Strategic planning was guided by a member survey administered by the Membership Committee and studied by the Board in a planning retreat designed to develop a roadmap to guide GGS to its 50th year in 2005.
- The Advocacy and Public Policy Committee, chaired by Ellie Crosby and Kathy Floyd, continued to direct the Senior Advocacy Project, staffed by Janice Barracos and Kim Raymond.
- The Advocacy and Public Policy Committee held a training session on state budget issues to prepare for the 2002 Legislative Session.
- The Awards Committee, working with the Conference Committee, solicited nominations and coordinated the Awards program at the Annual Conference to recognize professional, older adults, GGS service, education, legislative, and meritorious service.
- The Communications Committee, chaired by Robyn Bartlett, established a Website Subcommittee to set up the GGS website www.georgiagerontologysociety.org, and to fully develop parameters for content and use of the site.

- The Communications Committee updated In Focus, the GGS newsletter, with a new masthead and new features such as member highlighting. Georgia Power continued to print the newsletter, and it was included in the website as well.
- Georgia Power Company continued to fund printing of the Membership Directory.
- The Student Affairs Committee, co-chaired by Kathleen McNulty and Nancy Kriseman, worked to engage students in GGS, sponsoring student attendance at the Southeast Regional Student Convention in Gerontology and Geriatrics and the GGS Annual Meeting.
- The Student Affairs Committee devised a plan to develop campus chapters for students.
- The Scholarship Committee, chaired by Barbara Rosenberg and Linnie Martin, reached the $46,000 mark in assets with half of the Annual Silent Auction proceeds going to the Fund.
- The Education and Training Section, chaired by Barbara Karcher, began e-mail blasts to the membership announcing upcoming training opportunities and education events.
- The Education and Training Section and the Long Term Care Section co-sponsored the “Staffing Solutions Conference,” the second in a series of conferences to address the staffing shortage in long term care.
- The Education and Training Section co-sponsored, with the Georgia AARP office, eight in-service training sessions begun in 2002 and continuing into 2003 across the state for long term care staff.
- The Education and Training Section published a GGG Directory of Research in Aging, with the financial support of AARP, and distributed it to academic institutions and the Georgia legislature to serve as a resource for special knowledge in the many aspects of aging.
- The Multi-Cultural Aging Section, chaired by Yolanda Hallas, changed its name to Diversity Section and presented a session at the annual conference on Grandparents Raising Grandchildren in Diverse Communities.
- The Non-Profit Management Section was discontinued as it became a Home and Community Based Services membership group of the Georgia Association of Homes and Services for the Aging.
- The Business & Aging, Case Management, and Health Sections were inactive for lack of leadership. Local Case Management groups continued to meet and network in Atlanta and Macon.

2003

- The Advocacy and Public Policy Committee, chaired by Kathy Floyd, spearheaded Senior Week at the Capital and involved members in staffing the GGS display.
- The Advocacy and Public Policy Committee continued oversight of the Senior Advocacy Project, staffed by Kim Raymond, participated in CO-AGE, and involved members in advocacy alerts.
- The Awards Committee, chaired by Lois Ricci and Yolanda Hallas, solicited nominations and coordinated the Awards program at the Annual Conference to recognize professional, older adults, GGS service, education, legislative, and meritorious service.
- The Communications Committee, chaired by Frank Boyd, continued to develop the GGS Website to include conference news and registration, member spotlights, and picture from GGS events.

- The Communications Committee ceased publication of the printed In Focus newsletter, largely to save on costs, and placed it on-line.
- The Membership Committee, chaired by Melanie McNeil, published the Membership Directory, printed by Georgia Power Company.
- The Education, Research, and Training Section, chaired by Lois Ricci, continued email blasts which enabled members to learn immediately about training events, grants, employment opportunities, and noteworthy events in gerontology.
- The Scholarship Fund Committee, chaired by Nancy Morrison, reached its $50,000 goal with a successful Silent Auction and will present the first Virginia Smyth Scholarship Award in 2004.
- The Diversity Section, chaired by Yolanda Hallas, and the Long-Term Care Section, chaired by Penny Medhurst, reported no activity during the year.
- The Business & Aging, Case Management, and Health Sections were inactive due to absence of leadership. Local Case Management groups continued to meet and network in Atlanta and Macon.

2004

The GGS website became the vehicle for communication and no official written 2004 Annual Report was published;

- The Awards Committee, chaired by Jan Kauffman, solicited nominations and coordinated the Awards program at the Annual Conference to recognize professional, older adults, GGS service, education, legislative, and meritorious service.
- The Scholarship Committee presented the first Virginia Smyth Scholarship Award to Megan Janke of the University of Georgia. The GGS Scholarship fund ended the year with $76,324.
- The Advocacy and Public Policy Committee continued oversight of the Senior Advocacy Project, staffed by Kim Raymond, participated in CO-AGE, and involved members in advocacy alerts.
- The Communications Committee, with the assistance of webmaster Penny Medhurst, continued to develop the GGS Website to include conference news and registration, member spotlights, pictures from GGS events, members only features, membership application, membership directory, and links to other aging-related sites. A special printed newsletter on Caregiving Issues was published in the summer.
- The Education, Research, and Training Section continued email blasts which informed members of state, regional, and national educational opportunities, grants, employment openings, and other relevant events. Discussion among the Board defined that the e-mail blasts would not be used for advocacy issues.
- Guest facilitator Cheryl Schramm, used the three focus areas determined in 2003 (increase membership, increase visibility and strengthen the community of professionals) and guided the board in developing a plan for the year. Results included each board member recruiting a new member, the development of a packet of materials to recruit members (brochures, benefits of membership, etc.) and members were encouraged to host “coffees” around the state.
- A new membership brochure was developed with new colors of royal blue/white and a new logo. Membership dues were increased from $40 to $50 (general) and $100 to $150 (organizational).

Membership (1995 – 2004)

With strong Board involvement in recruitment and the nurturing of active local chapters and statewide sections, the Society built on the work of the early 1990s to continue substantial growth in individual and organizational memberships through 1996. Organizational benefits put in place during 1994 allowed participation by an unlimited number of staff of the organizations, bringing more interested people to seminars and the conferences. However, membership declined 1997 to 2000 before renewed Board attention and involvement of Society members began to bring new members and improve retention.

1995

Total membership reached a high of 454, with 82 organizational memberships and 372 individual memberships. The Sections and Chapters proved to be excellent vehicles for membership recruitment and local participation by GGS in the professional lives of the membership.

1996

Total membership was 429, with 75 organizational memberships and 354 individual memberships.

1997

Total membership declined substantially with 212, with 47 organizational memberships and 165 individual memberships. While sections and chapters remained active, membership renewal was not occurring.

1998

Total membership was 257, with 56 organization memberships and 201 individual memberships.

1999

Membership continued to remain low with 204 total members, including 47 organizational members and 157 individual members.

2000

Total membership was 268 with 78 organization memberships and 290 individual memberships.

2001

Total membership increased to 364 with 89 organization memberships and 275 individual memberships.

2002

Total membership was 362 with 74 organizational memberships and 288 individual memberships. The trend continued that organizational memberships remained relatively steady, but individual membership declined. The state of the economy may well have played a role, but failure to engage the new professionals entering the field might be a factor as well. Without a strong sense of identification with the Society, newer staff tend to take advantage of the organization's membership rather than paying for an individual membership.

2003

Total membership declined to 304 members with 80 organizational memberships and 224 individual memberships. The decline is entirely in the individual membership category.

2004

The year ended with 249 members with 189 individual and 60 organizational memberships.

Finances

(1995 - 2004)

1995

Beginning the year with a cash balance of $11,016.11 gave the Society real stability. Membership brought in $14,190 during the year, and the 40th anniversary conference had income of $59,299.65. With income for the Scholarship Fund, Sections and Chapters, printing by Georgia Power, miscellaneous income, and $1651.76 in interest on CDs for Student Affairs, the total income for the years was $79,226.40. Total expenses for the year were $81,080.98 leaving an end-of-year balance of $9,161.53. Assets included the cash balance and two CDs of $10,694.35 and $6,595.13.

1996

The Society began the year with a cash balance of $9,161.53 and ended the year with a cash balance of $16,349.79. Income of $74,134.67 included $12,654 in memberships, $45,164.04 in conference proceeds, and $12,500 income from the new Senior Advocacy Project. Additional income included the Scholarship Funds, Sections and Chapters, Georgia Power sponsorship of the newsletter, and CD interest. Expenses were less than income at $66,946.50. Two CDs were valued at $11,374.24 and $6,259.62.

1997

The beginning cash balance was $16,349.79 and the year-end cash balance was $11,492.05. Income of $84,507.67 included $9,325 in memberships, $55,577.06 from the conference, and $16,011.59 for the Senior Advocacy Project. Other income included Student Affairs, Sections, Chapters, and CD interest of $314.53. Total expenses of $89,365.32 exceeded income, and the CDs were valued at $12,054.87 and $6,293.79.

1998

The Annual Report shows a beginning balance of $11,608.36, a slight adjustment from the year-end balance report in 1998, but with no explanation of the reason for the adjustment. Income for the year totaled $103,456.99 including $12,624 in membership, $61,792.08 from the annual conference, and $22,419.25 for the Senior Advocacy Project (income for 1998 and 1999 combined). Additional income included Student Affairs, Sections and Chapters, and CD Interest of $293.79. Expenses of $87,865.27 were substantially less than income and left a healthy cash balance of $27,199.98. Two CDs lost value, ending the year at $11,070.64 and $6,299.51.

1999

The previous cash balance was $27,199.98 and the ending balance was $29,695.42 showing that income exceeded expenses for the year. Income included $10,073 from Memberships; $48,580 from Conference and Training events; $38,090.90 from the Senior Advocacy Project; and assorted other miscellaneous categories. The CDs were valued at $11,354.52 and $6,561.31.

2000

The beginning cash balance was $29,695.42, and the ending balance was $9,561.00. Income of $71,007.00 included $10,635 in memberships, $50,577 in conference proceeds, $8,603 for the Senior Advocacy Project, small amounts for Student Affairs and miscellaneous, and $942 in interest income. Expenses of $91,141 dramatically exceeded income. CDs increased slightly in value to $11,545 and $6,822.

2001

The Annual Report indicates a beginning cash balance of $9,411.00, a slight adjustment from the year-end balance report in 2000, but with no explanation of the reason for the adjustment. Income for the year totaled $114,077.00 including $12,413 from memberships, $67,817.50 from the conference, $30,711.30 for the Senior Citizens Advocacy Project, $891.70 from interest income, and miscellaneous other income. Expenses slightly exceeded income at $116,968.12. At the end of the year, assets included CDs worth $12,810.68 and $7,160.24 and a cash balance of $6,519.88.

2002

The year began with a cash balance of $6,519.88 and ended with a cash balance of $28,825.14. This improvement was the result of significant Board attention to streamlining function and lowering costs wherever possible and strong development activities on the part of the Augusta conference committee. Income of $176,011.40 included $10,915 in membership, $106,975.31 from the conference, $52,305.45 for the Senior Citizens Advocacy Project, $4,081.10 for the Scholarship Fund, and miscellaneous student affairs and interest income. Expenses totaled $153,706.14, and CDs were valued at a total of $19,571.61.

2003

The beginning cash balance was not reflected in the Annual Report but should have been $28,825.14 based on the 2002 Annual Report. Total income was reported at $108,063.60. Income included $8,820 from memberships, $58,164.80 from the conference, and $40,801.30 from the Senior Citizen Advocacy Project. Expenses were slightly less than income at $107,399.49 and left a cash balance at the end of the year of $28,704.78. This year-end cash balance is about $800 less than one would expect if the beginning cash balance, income and expenses are all accurate. CD values reached $21,538.24.

2004

The total income for the year was $109,337 that included $64,629 from the Annual Conference, $11,870 for membership dues and $32,242 for the Senior Citizen Advocacy Project. Expenses were $130,200. The year-end cash balance was $29,459.98. The two CD were closed and $14,084.73 (student CD) was transferred to the Community Foundation for the Scholarship Fund and the $7453.51 (general) was transferred to the checking account.

Annual Meetings

(1995 – 2004)

For many members of the Society, the Annual Conference and Meeting is the major benefit of membership. During GGS' 5th decade, the Conference continued to offer high-quality educational activities, networking opportunities for professionals and advocates from a variety of backgrounds, and statewide visibility for the Society.

1995

The Society held the 40th Annual Meeting and Conference, "Continuity-Change-Challenge: Aging in the 21st Century," at the Radisson Riverfront Hotel in August on October 18-20. Co-Chairs Kathleen Ernce, Jeannette Cummings and Pamela Johnson worked tirelessly to secure significant sponsorships and contributions to make the celebration a very successful event. The opening session featured Willie D. Larkin, Ph.D., discussing "The Power of Self-Mastery," and a special highlight was a keynote presentation by Monsignor Charles J. Fahey, of the Third Age Center, Fordham University, on "Continuity-Change-Challenge: Aging in the 21st Century." Judy Hagebak, Director of the Georgia Division of Aging Services provided the closing keynote speech on "White House Conference on Aging: Its Impact and Implications." Four intensives on adult day care, comprehensive health care, assistive technology, and dealing with difficult personalities were followed by 34 educational sessions. During the Awards Banquet, a special Anniversary celebration was coordinated by the Awards Committee. Founding GGS Members Scott Houston, Sophia Deutschberger, Virginia Smyth, John Tyler Mauldin (in absentia), and Louis Newmark (in absentia) were recognized with Founders' Awards, and the Banquet program included a Brief History of GGS and pictures of the Founders.

The 41st Annual Meeting and Conference, "The Changing Faces of Aging," was held at the Crowne Plaza Hotel in Macon, October 16-18. Co-chairs Linda Hampton, Jill Hayes and Sandra Lieberman put together one of the most financially successful conferences held to date through their development efforts. The Opening Session "Aging Outrageously and Courageously" was presented by sociologist, poet, author, and professor Ruth Harriet Jacobs. Author and Musician Bob Mitchell gave the general morning session on "Laughter is the Best Medicine." Charlee Lambert and cast of Educational Playmakers present a play, "The Ring" about a family coping with Alzheimer's Disease. The final morning General session, "The Changing Faces of Aging Services," was led by Sandra Lieberman, Executive Director of American Aging Concern.

A special contest was held in the Macon area to develop the cover design for the program, won by Barbara Batchelor, a Baldwin County artist. An essay contest on "My Favorite Older Person" was won by Andrea Health from Alexander II Magnet School in Macon.

The Society's 42nd Annual Meeting, co-chaired by Catherine Ivy and P.K. Beville, was held November 12-14 at the Cobb Galleria Center with the theme "...Today's Challenges, Building Tomorrow's Opportunities." William F. Benson, Acting Deputy Assistant Secretary for Aging, US Department of Health and Human Services, opened the two-day meeting with provoking thoughts on “Aging in the 21st Century.” This set the stage for the exciting two days of workshops and forums featuring national and local presenters with five defined tracks: Redefining Retirement, Creative Management strategies, Health Care Options, Case Management, and Student Activities and Education. A plenary session addressed the critical issues of Welfare Reform and a public forum held on the last morning asked “Where is the care in Health Care?” State Representative Tom Sherrill, honored for his consistent support of issues affecting older Georgians, spoke at the closing session.

1998

At the Society’s 43rd Annual meeting, held September 27-29 at the Historic DeSoto Hilton in Savannah, the Society “Set Sail for Global Aging” and kicked off the celebrations of 1999 as the International Year of Older Persons. The conference, chaired by Patricia Whitmore, focused on the cultural diversity of Georgia’s older population, changes in the health care system, new directions in care management, spirituality, caregiving, and other emergent issues in our field. Keynote speakers included Dr. Douglas Bachtel, UGA Consumer Economics professor and editor of The Georgia County Guide, speaking on “Georgia’s Changing Demographic Environment: A Gerontological Perspective” and Dr. Jep Hostetler, Ohio State University College of Medicine faculty and author of books concerning alcohol and drug abuse, speaking on “Humor, Health and Healing.” Special tracks were developed to serve Section members in their professional interest areas, and time was set aside for Section meetings. The GGS Scholarship Fund was publicly inaugurated with a reception during the conference, and the Annual GGS Business Meeting and new member orientation were held.

1999

The Society’s 44th Annual Meeting was held at the state’s new Brasstown Bald Resort in Young Harris. Chair Jill Hayes and the Conference Committee provided an excellent series of plenary session and educational seminars in the two-day meeting “Passage to the Top.” Six plenary sessions included: “Highlights from the International Year of the Older Person,” by Brigid Donelan, United Nations staff person assigned to the project; “The Future of Long Term Care: Boom or Bust for the Boomers,” by Steve Moses, President of the Center for Long-Term Care Financing in Seattle, WA; “A Foxy Old Woman’s Guide to Living with Friends,” by Cynthia Cary, a clinical social worker in private practice in Hawaii; “Sustainable Communities: Impact on an Aging Population,” by Mark Fitzgerald, Executive Vice President of the Greater Atlanta Home Builders Association, and Ellen Gray Keys, of Jordan, Jones & Goulding engineering firm; “Life Course Planning: Retirement, Social Security Reform and the Economics of Aging,” by Myrtle Habersham, Social Security Administration Atlanta Regional Commissioner; and Teaching Gerontology through Literature,” by Mary Ann Fulton Kirkpatrick, Assistant Professor of Pharmacy of Virginia Commonwealth University. In addition, section meetings, student paper presentations, and the Annual Business meeting were held, and 16 concurrent sessions focused on health, assessment, management, legislative, technology, and long term care issues.

The 45th Annual Meeting and conference, “Millennium Madness: Creating New Visions,” was held at Sea Palms Resort on St. Simons Island and was chaired by Betty Klein, Barbara Rosenberg, and Patt

Whitmore. The opening session, “Planning for the Mature Boomers: A Report from the Future,” gave an overview of aging issues in a 2025 setting looking back to the turn of the century. Another keynote focused on “Developing the Leader Within,” and the closing session was a report “Caregiving in Georgia: whose Responsibility is it anyway?” Workshops were centered around tracks focusing on Leadership, Housing, Staffing, Caregiving, Mental Health, and Successful Aging. In addition, the Silent Auction, section meetings, student paper presentations, and the Annual Business meeting were held.

The 46th Annual Meeting and Conference, “Put on Your Playing Shoes...It’s a Brand New Game,” was held at the Columbus Hilton and Columbus Convention and Trade Center. Co-chairs Ken Mitchell, Mickey Holloway, and Pat Mitchell organized a program which included Barbara Jones, State quality Director, discussing “Creating a Culture of Performance Excellence in Your Organization; Genevieve Gipson, Career Nurse Assistants Program, and Judith Riggs, National Alzheimer’s Association, presenting “Exploring Pathways to Long Term Care Staffing Solutions”; and Sandra Bertman, University of Massachusetts, presenting “Aging and the Ageless Spirit” Workshop tracks included Leadership Development, Long Term Care Staffing, CAN and Direct Caregiving, Lifestyle Choices, Best Practices, Reaching Diverse Populations and Preventing Financial Exploitation. A special highlight was the learning track for Certified Nursing Assistants, attended by 100 CNAs through scholarships provided by Georgia’s Area Agencies on Aging.

2002

The 47th Annual Meeting and Conference, co-chaired by Kathleen Ernce and Jeanette Cummings, was held at the Radisson Riverfront Hotel in Augusta and based on a national conference model. For the first time, the conference lasted a full day longer, and the committee invited a majority of the speakers. “The Aging Revolution: Challenge & Opportunity” featured keynote speakers: “Spiritual Development in Later Life: Implications for Practitioners: by Robert Atchley, Naropa University; “The Transformative Tale: Using Storytelling to Enhance the Elder Journey” by Richard Stone, StoryWork Institute; “Marketing Evolution within the Aging Revolution” by Vicki Thomas, Thomas & Partners; and “United We Stand: Growing, Dying and Friendship” by Rosie Messer, Augusta Resource Center on Aging. Workshop tracks included Aging and spirituality, Leadership and Management, Elder Rights and Advocacy, Senior Centers, Health and Wellness, Education and Training, and several special sessions. Two pre-conference intensives were held as well as three post-conference bonus sessions. The President’s Reception at the Morris Museum, the film festival, the Gullah Storyteller and chocolate treat throughout were highlights for attendees.

The 48th Annual Meeting and Conference, “Making Georgia a Good Place to Age,” was chaired by Kathryn Fowler and held at The Classic Center in Athens. In deference to the economy and budget constraints on travel among member agencies, the committee was asked to return to the 3-day conference model of prior years in order to encourage attendance. The opening keynote session “Illumination of Elderhood” was presented by Dr. William Thomas, President and founder of the Eden

Alternative and was sponsored by the Barbara Fraser Legacy of Learning Fund. “Connecting the Dots – The Management of and Coping with Change Issues in Aging,” the story of “Who Moved My Cheese,” was presented by Nick Hannon. “Making Georgia a Good Place to Age,” closing remarks aimed at bringing together the ideas and considerations woven through the conference, was presented by Mary Arthur, President of Mission Works Consulting. Conference tracks included Building Healthy Communities, Caregiving, Changing the Culture of Aging in Georgia, Developing Quality Organizations, Protecting Elder Rights, and Serving the Whole Person.

A pre-conference intensive, “Strengthening the Circle of Care” was presented by Kathy Scott and Raye Rawls and attended by 45 Certified Nursing Assistants. The event was sponsored by AARP. The Georgia Chapter of the Alzheimer’s Association sponsored a Docs & Desserts Reception, featuring Dr. Larry Tune of Emory. The President’s Reception at the historic Georgian Hotel was a special treat for attendees.

The 49th Annual Meeting and Conference, “Adaptation for an Aging Society,” was held at the Renaissance Atlanta Hotel - Downtown, and was chaired by Barbara McBrayer-Brice. Featured speakers at keynote sessions included Terry Tafoya, PhD, executive director of Tamanawit Unlimited, presenting “Walking Life’s Circle: The Integration of Generations”; Paul Nussbaum, PhD, presenting “Building a Brain to Last a Lifetime” sponsored by the Barbara Fraser Legacy of Learning Fund; and John Banja, PhD, clinical ethicist at the Center for Ethics and associate professor in the Department of Rehabilitation Medicine at Emory University in Atlanta, presenting “The Difficult Client.” The Barbara Pittard Payne Lectureship in Gerontology, sponsored by the Gerontology Institute at Georgia State University, was presented by Jon Pynoss, PhD, UPS Foundation Professor of Gerontology, Policy, Planning and Development at the Andrus Gerontology Center of the University of Southern California and Director of the national Resource Center on Supportive Housing and Home Modifications, on the topic “Aging in Place:: Obstacles, Options, and Opportunities.” Conference tracks included the Aging Mind, Family Perspectives, Livable Communities, Adaptation in Health Care, Culture and Ethics, and Collaboratives and Joint Ventures. For the first time, GGS included intensives as part of the Annual Conference regular programming. They included “Putting the Power in Presentation” by Maureen Kelly and Art Kalinski of Atlanta Regional Commission; “Key Issues in Hiring In-Home Workers” by Susan Flanagan; “Your Fiscal Check-UP: Practical Financial Planning Strategies for Women” by Kris Dwyer; and “Aware Home Tours” by Dr. Wendy Rogers of Georgia Institute of Technology.

Revisions of the Bylaws (1995 – 2004)

2000

The Annual Report indicates a revision to the By-Laws to improve Board function. No detailed report could be located in the files concerning this change.

2004

Article IV – Membership, Section 2 – Categories of Membership was amended to delete the words “lifetime membership” in order to maintain a regular stream in membership dues income to protect the financial viability of the Society. Current lifetime members were to keep their lifetime memberships.

Article VI – Officers and their duties, Section 4 – Duties of the Officers was amended in the paragraph that describes the Vice President, deleting “and shall be the chairperson of the Membership Committee.” The explanation was that the Board had found there were times when the Vice-President might not be the strongest candidate for leading the membership committee. This change gave the President the opportunity to choose the most appropriate candidate to chair the membership committee.

Article VII – Committees, Section 2 – Standing Committees was amended to delete the phrase “with the exception of the Membership Committee” at the end of the charge that “Standing Committee Chairpersons shall be appointed by the President from the members of the Board.” This change aligned this Section with the change explained above.

Article VII – Committees, Section 2 – Standing Committees was further amended to add, at the end of the paragraph, the following statement: “Standing Committees may include but are not limited to the following:” followed by a list of the Standing Committees. This change gave flexibility for adding a committee or allowing a committee to be inactive for a year, depending on the needs of the Society.

Appendix C

History of the Georgia Gerontology Society Awards

The Georgia Gerontology Society established an early tradition of recognizing significant achievement and contributions to the field of aging. Since 1966, the Annual Meeting and Conference has included an Awards Ceremony as a particular highlight.

During the first years, awards were given in a variety of categories - Individual, Professional, Distinguished Service, and area of service. With the passage of time, the number and type of awards has become more established. Several awards have been named for individuals who have been significant to the Georgia Gerontology Society and to gerontology in the state of Georgia - John Tyler Mauldin, Elsie Alvis, Louis Newmark, Robert P. Wray, Marietta Suhart, and Dan Hickman. As the Society celebrates its 50th Anniversary, the following Awards are our standard.

The Elsie Alvis Award is given to the outstanding professional in gerontology with a minimum of 15 years of service. The Award was first given in 1970 as a Professional Award and was named in honor of Elsie Alvis in 1980. This designation honors an early GGS member who received the Individual Award in 1966, the first year Awards were made. She served as the Director of the Governor's Commission on Aging, later the State Commission on Aging, beginning in 1960. She served well past the age of 70 and directed statewide study to develop Georgia's Story of Her Aging, published as the official Georgia report to the 1961 White House Conference on Aging.

The John Tyler Mauldin Award is given to an older individual in Georgia who exemplifies a positive role model of outstanding Achievement in the field of Aging. First given to Dr. Mauldin in 1967 as the First Annual Outstanding Achievement Award, it was named for the first recipient the next year. Dr. Mauldin, a prominent Atlanta surgeon and also an early GGS activist, was appointed in 1959 to Chair the newly established Governor's Commission on Aging, later the State Commission. He directed the planning of Georgia's participation in the 1961 White House Conference on Aging.

The Louis Newmark Award is presented to an individual providing at least 10 years of service to aging, with particular attention to the Georgia Gerontology Society. The Award was first given in 1982 to Louis Newmark, the Society's first President, in recognition for his nearly three decades of service to gerontology in Georgia and to the Society. Louis Newmark also won several GGS Awards for his social service and service to the Society and was the Society's historian for the first three decades of its existence. He was also a founder of the Georgia Conference on Social Welfare.

The Marietta Suhart Award, established in 1993 shortly after Marietta's death, is given to the individual with demonstrated ability to educate para-professionals, professionals and other persons working with older adults; proven leadership and vision in gerontology by development/expansion of educational programs and services; and recognized ability to touch as well as to teach learners. A long-time GGS Board member, hard-working committee member, and enthusiastic educator who fit the description of the Award established in her name, Marietta Suhart was the Gerontology Specialist with the University of Georgia Continuing Education program.

The Dan Hickman Award is presented to the person who has shown excellence in the profession of Care/Case Management and who exhibits leadership in the profession by providing exceptional direct services, training fellow Care Managers, and/or advocating for improvements in care management. The Award was established in 1998 and first presented in 1999 in memory of Dan, who was the Community Care Services Program Manager with the Georgia Division of Aging Services. He helped to define case management as a profession in Georgia, and he exhibited great spirit, zest, and integrity in support of the profession.

The Robert P. Wray Student Scholarship Award is presented by the Student Affairs Committee through a process other than through membership nominations. Robert P. Wray was an active GGS member, a founder of numerous service programs in Pennsylvania and Georgia, and was the first Director of the University of Georgia Gerontology Center. He was first posthumously honored in 1989 by designation of the Wray Legislative Award. However, Society members quickly realized that this educator's memory would be best honored through naming of the annual gerontology scholarship award.

The Legislative Award is given to the legislator who has sponsored or co-sponsored legislation that would improve the quality of life for older adults; has consistently supported aging issues; and has been willing to listen to the concerns of Georgia's elderly.

The Virginia Smyth Scholarship is presented annually to offer financial support to persons seeking to advance their careers in aging. The fund, established in 1998, provides scholarships for graduate study in gerontology and promotes leadership development in the field of aging to include a broad knowledge base, strong organizational skills and a vision for the future. The Scholarship was first awarded in 2004 and named for Virginia Smyth, a founding member of GGS and the spirit behind the establishment and endowment of the GGS Scholarship Fund.

Special citations to individuals who deserve recognition because of achievement, service, exemplary living and/or commitment to aging may also be presented at the Awards Banquet. These citations are chosen by the Awards Committee.
